Sick Headache
CURED PERMANENTLY
BY TAKING
Ayer's Pills

'I was troubled a long time with sick headache. It was usually accompanied with severe pains in the temples, a sense of fullness and tenderness in one eye, a bad taste in my mouth, tongue coated, hands and feet cold, and sickness at the stomach. I tried a good many remedies recommended for this complaint; but it was not until I

Began Taking Ayer's Pills

that I received anything like permanent benefit. A single box of these pills did the work for me, and I am now free from headaches, and a well man."—C. H. HUTCHINGS, East Auburn, Me Facts.

"Facts are to the mind what food is to the body"—a means of sustenance, growth and enlargement. The thought naturally suggests itself that a lot of undigested facts—facts which have not become part of the "bone and sinew" of the intellect, must produce, one would think, a sort of mental indigestion. With most of us who engage in heterogenous reading, and thinking from that reading, the mind is receiving and retaining impressions, forming opinions from those impressions, and ends by retaining nothing but a picture gallery of impressions. But how nonplussed we are, when we wage a wordy war, to have our opponent suddenly demand "facts, sir! facts!" and he will take nothing less than facts as proof for your statements. All the impressions of a life-time, and all your assurances that you have certainly seen or heard something somewhere that would certainly convince him you are in the right, pass for naught. At such a moment you cannot help but wish that you had a few undigested facts lying around you lose; that instead of having a living, thinking brain, you had made of it a dry-as-dust encyclopedia, or a disorderly lumber room of ready-made, unpacked facts, labelled ready for use in various emergencies, thus —"fact: warranted to knock the annexationist into a cocked hat." "Fact: good for taking the wind out of the sails of a remedial legislationist." Or "fact: sure proof that fashion has caused more slavery and crime than either strong drink or war." The fact is, the finer sort of minds refuse to be made the perpetual repositary for a lot of disjointed, disconnected facts. Having fed upon them and received due nourishment they cast them aside as so much dross. To the perpetual trotting out of distorted and disconnected facts, we owe the war of creeds which disgrace Christendom; to this same source, the adventurer who is making a living at politics, owes his ability to make partizans and climb by their assistance into power. Strip mankind of their poor little outside cloak of formal facts, and however different they may have appeared in all the glory of what they are pleased to call their beliefs, they think very much alike after all. In the presence of supreme and unforeseen crises, before man has had time to adjust his little cloak to suit the occasion, or mayhap the cloak which he has fondly believed was part and parcel of himself, has in the stress of the unforeseen fallen away from him, he finds he is, after all, very much like his neighbors. When we get back to the primary and fundamental "we are all a man and a brudder."

All this does not prevent us loving a real good fight and a sharpening of our wits against our neighbors, especially those of us who boast of Irish blood in our veins. For such I can prophecy a "right smart" fight, as Fritz, believing his last article had found perpetual repose in the W. P. B., will be found this week "pitching into" the gentleman whom a couple of weeks ago I referred to as a brilliant journalist, at the same time publishing his encouraging letter. I've no doubt the "Kohinoor," as Fritz calls him, will produce some good sized flashes, and there may be fire-works worth seeing. I confess I have been tempted to sit upon the fence for a week or so and watch the duel out. But as the end is not yet in sight, and another amusing feature has just loomed up, I might have to sit there a long time. The new feature is this: There is a certain journalist in Toronto who for some time has been writing over the name of "Fritz" and this week he indignantly repudiates being the author of those anglophobic letters, but hints that his pen name has been deliberately stolen, for the sake of casting blame upon him. While this happens to be very much wide of the mark ("Unser Fritz's" name being his by right of baptism) it may be that we shall have a very pretty three corned fight on; in that case it might be safer up a tree. County and District.

Perth County Council have decided to build a poor house.

A farmer has been fined $5 and costs at Walkerton for feeding uncooked offal to hogs.

The township of King will spend $1700 in gravelling its roads during the coming summer.

Mr Luesing of Hanover has a cow which gives 53 pounds of milk each day. The weight of butter made from the milk of this cow averages 21 pounds per week.—Hanover Post.

We are informed that the prospects of obtaining a charter and subsidy from the Dominion Government for the Huron and Ontario Railway are good, and futhermore that the promoter, Mr. Pugh, has made arrangement with a firm of American brokers for the purchase of the stock and the construction of the road.—Shelburne Economist.

Robert Ainsbrough, the Patron nominee for North Wellington, has retired from the field. The fight will probably be between James McMullen and L. H. Clarke at the next general election.

The 11-year-old son of James McComb of Granger, Mono township, lost his life in a pecular manner on Saturday. The lad was hauling wood into a shed on a small sleigh. From the rafters of the shed hung a rope with a noose on the end of it. The boy stood upon his sleigh to reach this rope and take it down. His head by some means got into the noose, the sleigh slipped from under his feet, and he found himself hanging by the neck. A younger child saw him there and gave the alarm, but it was too late. The lad was dead when assistance arrived. He was the youngest of four. No inquest was held.—Orangeville Advertiser.

On Saturday morning Feb. 1, John Kelly, of con. 1, Proton, went to the hay loft over the stable to feed his stock, leaving the lantern below. By some means the hay he threw down caught fire, burning up 7 head of cattle, about 3 tons of hay, 4 loads of straw and other articles. Kelly managed to get down from the hay loft and took out 4 horses safely. There being a heavy rain at the time and with the aid of the neighbor the barn was saved. Insured in the British American Assurance Company of Toronto.

spread to my chin, and I suffered in agony for seven long years. Finally, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In a week or two I noticed a Decided Improvement.

Encouraged by this result, I persevered, until in a month or so the sore under my chin began to heal. In three months my lip began to heal, and, after using the Sarsaparilla for six months, the last trace of the cancer disappeared."
