Almost a Hopeless Case.

A Terrible Cough. No Rest Night nor Day. Given up by Doctors.

A LIFE SAVED

BY TAKING

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"Several years ago, I caught a severe cold, attended with a terrible cough that allowed me no rest, either day or night. The doctors, after working over me to the best of their ability, pronounced my case hopeless, and said they could do no more for me. A friend, learning of my trouble, sent me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which I began to take, and very soon I was greatly relieved. By the time I had used the whole bottle, I was completely cured. I have never had much of a cough since that time, and I firmly believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—W. H. MRS. GEO. MOORHOUSE

DOT'S CORNER.

Who said Spring? To-day as I write we are having the seventeenth blizzard since we were led to hope that winter had ceased to linger in the lap of spring—at least for this year. But the foolish old fellow is still hanging round her,—sometimes in sullen, morose and frosty mood,—sometimes in a fury of jealousy that he is so soon to be cast off, he bestows his rough caresses where they are no longer welcome.

Meanwhile the farmer who has been buying feed all or most of the winter, bearing a brave front and daring to hope that spring would be early this year, is well nigh discouraged,—inclined to give up altogether. Tradesmen are blue, for whatever effects the agriculturist ultimately effects every business, trade and profession—that is every profession excepting law. (Did you ever know the man too poor to "have the law on him" or the lawyer who could not collect his fee? "Revenge is sweet" and mankind would sooner have it than bread.) And so it comes about that we are all high and low, the play things and the dupes of the weather.

Do you plan a pleasure excursion? The weather may spoil it. Do you reckon on your field of corn ripening? The weather may blight it. In short when one considers how dependant we all are upon such precarious and variable quantity as the weather,—something over which we cannot have the slightest control, and can only prognosticate with perfect certainty 24 hours ahead—when we consider all this, it becomes little short of wonderful that mortals have the pluck to keep on. They have probably incorporated into every day practice the amusing philosophy contained in the lines of Ramsay's funny weather song: "It's the weather! Blow the weather! "But whether it's cold or whether it's hot, We'll have to weather it, whether or not."

∴

This seems to be the motto of all people who ever amount to anything. To it the Anglo Saxons owe their dominance; they always "kept on kicking." But perhaps you have not heard the story. A milk man having pumped the usual quantity of water into the can of milk, left it until such time as he should start on his rounds. And this is what happened in the can: Two frogs had unhappily got pumped into the can at the same time as the water, and stood in imminent peril of a milky grave. Said one: "What vile mixture is this we are in? It stifles me; I can't stand it; I shall go to the bottom." Said the other: "There is no use giving up like that; let's keep on kicking and see what comes of it. But the first decided that there was no use making himself tired trying to keep up, so he went to the bottom at once and committed suicide. But when the milk man came to open his can he found No. 2 resting himself upon a nice little piece of butter—the result of his kicking—and singing in a contented bass "There is rest for the weary."

∴

Now, after all I've said about blizzards, snow storms, etc., it would be just like the weather to turn round and be beautiful, balmy and bright by the time this is in print. But should my remarks about the weather have any such result I shall not care how malapropos they may be.
