KIPLING'S WAR POEM.

Rudyard Kipling has contributed the following poem to The London Times:—

For all we have and are,
For all our children's fate,
Stand up and meet the war—
The Hun is at the gate.

Our world has passed away
In wanton overthrow;
There's nothing left to-day
But steel and fire and woe.

Though all we know depart,
The old commandments stand:
In courage keep your heart!
In strength lift up your hand!

Once more we hear the word
That sickened earth of old:
No law except the sword,
Unsheathed and uncontrolled.

Once more it knits mankind,
Once more the nations go
To meet and break and bind
A crazed and driven foe.

Comfort, content, delight,
The age's slow-bought gain,
They shriveled in a night—
Only ourselves remain

To face the naked days
In silent fortitude,
Through perils and dismays,
Renewed and re-renewed.

Though all we made depart,
The old commandments stand:
In patience keep your heart!
In strength lift up your hand!

No easy hopes or lies
Shall bring us to our goal—
But iron sacrifice
Of body, will and soul.

There's but one task for all,
For each one life to give;
Who stands if freedom fall?
Who dies if England live?

THE INDIAN TROOPS.

Britain's Hindu Forces May Now Be at Scene of War.

England is pouring into France from India 200,000 trained men, of which 75,000 are British troops, including some of the crack regiments of the army, and those remaining are the fighting native troops of the Indian army, fit comrades on the firing line of France's Turcos and Spahis. Some of these may have come through Canada.

According to official figures the Indian army's strength in round numbers, is as follows: Infantry, 122,000; cavalry, 25,000; artillery, 10,000; engineers, etc., 6,000; total, 163,000 men. Of this number 3,000 are English officers and non-commissioned officers; the rest are natives.

Thirty-nine regiments of cavalry, fifteen of them Lancer regiments, besides the bodyguard troops of the Governor-General and of the governors, and several independent troops, make up the mounted arm.

The main strength of the Indian army is in its infantry. Brahmans, Rajputs, Jats, Sikhs, Punjabis, Dogras, Mahratttas and Ghurkas, of all castes and of several religions—Mohammedan, Hindu, Buddhists — are all warriors who will lay down their lives in eagerness for the British Raj, and the dark-skinned regiments of the Indian army form a fighting force hard to stop.

Among the most interesting as well as the most formidable fighting outfits in the Indian army are the Ghurkas. There are ten regiments of Ghurka Rifles. These little fighters, who come from the region of Nepal and who trace their descent from the Rajputs, would rather fight than eat. In appearance the Ghurkas are deceiving. They are short, stocky little men, of somewhat the appearance of the Japanese, although a little heavier. And they wear perpetual grins on their faces. The grin does not come off when they go into a fight.

The Ghurkas were conquered by the British in 1814 after years of fighting, and have become loyal subjects of England. When the Ghurka regiments were first made part of the Indian army, they did not seem to take well to organized methods of warfare. It was not until the army authorities allowed them to make their national weapon, the kukri, part of their equipment, that they regained their fame as fighters. Their instructors never could make them use the bayonet. The kukri is a long, heavy curved knife.

"Aim For a Button!"

A London cable says: Many striking stories are told by wounded soldiers returning from France. "The blue gray uniforms of the Germans are hard to see at a disance," said a Yorkshire Light Infantryman, "and for concealing movements are more effective than our khaki. But it is surprising how quickly you learn to pick out such things as buttons, badges, armlets and even peaks of caps or spikes of helmets in the sun and tell by them of the moving men. You cannot see otherwise.

"Aim at a button a mile off, and you hit a German in the stomach is what we say and it is near enough to the truth.

"The Germans are such sticklers for rules that I have seen their artillery keep firing away at a position of ours after it has been occupied by their own men and at the hospital they find quite a number of Germans hit by their own fire."

Should Send Prisoners Here.

Lord Aylmer, former Inspector-General of Canadian forces, suggests that the Germans taken prisoners by the British army during the war should be sent to Canada and given tracts of land in sections where large areas await development, and be encouraged to settle as peaceful and productive citizens of the country.

Lord Aylmer, is in charge of the mobilization of the Kootenay company of the first Canadian contingent.

Wireless in the Field Prevents Communication Ever Being Cut Off

WIRELESS telegraphy is the new force in modern warfare which has changed all the old problems of communication. Formerly the aim was to capture and destroy the enemy's telegraph lines or submarine cables. Nowadays the matter is not so simple, for the wireless zones cover Europe, and ships at sea may be in touch with the War Offices in their capitals.

A wireless expert, writing in The London Chronicle, gives in an illuminating way the realization of what the new telegraphy means and how it is made use of in war. He says:—

"Through the medium of the Eiffel Tower regular communication should be maintained with the wireless telegraph station at Moscow or St. Petersburg and France and Russia should therefore be able to keep in continuous communication, despite any interruption of the ordinary telegraph service. The danger of interference with the wireless service by stations of the opposing nations is practically non-existent. To commence with, each station would be too busily engaged in dealing with its own correspondence to attempt to prevent another station from working, and at best they could only hope to overhear communications.

"TAPPING IMPRACTICABLE.

"In wireless telegraph, the adjustment of one circuit to another in such a way that the 'time-periods' are the same throughout the system, so that electro-magnetic waves possessing a different time-period will produce little or no effect on the system, considerably reduces the danger of tapping messages, while the provision of secret codes and cyphers would make such fragments of messages as are overheard unintelligible to an outside party.

"An incident during the recent Balkan war illustrates the remarkable reliability of wireless telegraphy. During the siege of Adrianople, all communication between the city and Constantinople was stopped. But shut up in the beleaguered city with the imprisoned garrison was a 1½ k.w. Marconi wireless telegraph station of the portable type, and this fortunate circumstance alone enabled her to keep in touch with Constantinople, where is installed another Marconi station.

At no time did the station fall, and during the time that the city was invested over 450,000 words were transmitted to headquarters without a hitch. This, too, in spite of the difficulties the allies attempted to create by placing one of their stations to the westward of Adrianople and another to the eastward, so that they might come as nearly as possible in a direct line between the Adrianople and Constantinople stations. As soon as the latter commenced calling up Adrianople, or vice versa, he allies hammered away at their two stations in a vigorous but vain attempt to "jam" the Turkish signals. The efforts of the Turks were entirely successful.

STOPS GUERILLA WARFARE.

"Thanks to Mr. Marconi's genius, and largely to his company's enterprise, portable wireless telegraphy is available for field use. It is more than likely that the use of this apparatus will help to curtail that particularly troublesome form of warfare—guerilla fighting.

"Portable military stations are designed to be carried in carts, automobiles, on pack-saddles, and by hand, and they are adapted for use on aeroplanes and airships, the range of communication being 12 and 350 miles or more, according to the type employed. The Marconi stations are ingeniously designed to insure absolute secrecy, the method being to change the wave-length of the transmitter at frequent intervals from one fixed wave-length to another in a fraction of a second.

"The operator can therefore change his wave-length or 'tune' after every three or four words to any of the waves to which his switch has been adjusted by sending a code letter indicating to which 'tune' he was about to change. The operator at the station with which he is communicating, and whose receiver is similarly fitted, would be able to follow him without difficulty. The wireless service of an army, properly organized with such stations as these, makes it impossible for any station not informed to read messages transmitted.

The White Star liner Oceanic, was wrecked in the North Sea, and is a total loss.

Saskatchewan's offer of 1,500 horses to the Imperial Government has been accepted.

Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture for Alberta, speaking at the Exhibition, urged that Canada's greatest war duty was to grow crops and raise food.

Besides the U. S. cutter Bear, which is again hunting for the marooned members of Stefanson's expedition, another vessel, the Corwin, has been sent on the search by Jafet Linderberg, a Nome millionaire friend of the explorer.

A subscriber to The Leader sent us an ear of corn which is quite a curiosity. The ear is nine inches long and scattered among the kernels of corn are quite a number of oats growing from the cob. Altogether the cob is well covered with corn and oats. How the oats came to grow among the kernels of corn is a mystery. The ear may be seen at The Leader Office.—Tara Leader.

Mr. J. A. Caswell was seriously injured while running a threshing outfit at Mr. John Blake's on the 4th con., Bentinck. It appears that the sleeve of his smock caught on the set screw on the shaft, whirling his right arm around the shaft, and breaking both bones of his forearm. The set screw also tore a deep gash in his arm.

As a result of an outbreak of rabies in Harriston, the local board of health has ordered all dogs to be muzzled or destroyed. Samuel Henry of Hamilton, who was visiting in Harriston a week ago, was bitten by a dog, and has been ordered since to take three weeks treatment in Toronto, the dog, it has since been found out, having been affected with rabies.

Three branches of the Dufferin Women's Institute contributed $132.19 to the Red Cross Society, made up as follows:—Shelburne $77.00, Honeywood $50.00, Whitfield $5 00. The Shelburne Branch also expressed to the Society a bale containing 26 feather pillows, 83 pillow slips, 13 mending kits, 75 pair woolen socks, 20 dozen handkerchiefs and 11 flannel shirts.—Free Press.

Mr. H T. Potts, one of the directors of the Sydenham Fire Insurance Co'y. informs us that the Company lost nine barns during the severe electrical storm of two weeks ago, and while one half of the members of the company have rodded buildings not one was destroyed. Surely this was strong evidence of the virtue of lightning rods, if they are of the right kind. The rates should be made more favorable to those who have rodded buildings or otherwise have a Company which will insure rodded buildings only.—Tara Leader.

Wm Harding's little son of Lions Head had a very narrow escape recently. Late in the afternoon he went back in the fields to bring the cows home. Horses were pasturing in the same field and one of them kicked him on the side of the head. After about half an hour his mother became anxious and going to the field she found him crying in a fence corner and blood rushing from his mouth and nostrils. Dr. Hacking attended him but no extremely serious injury was apparent. Had the horse been shod the boy would doubtless have been killed.

The Midland Argus says:—Several people were startled throughout this section on Friday last by the report of a terrific explosion which broke some glass in Victoria Harbor and Port McNicoll, and some thought the Germans had sent an airship over these parts and tried to drop a bomb on the elevators. The explosion, although not due to any such cause, was a real one, for eleven cases of dynamite stored on Methodist Island across from Port McNicoll were set off in order to get rid of it by the C. P. R. The explosive was used during the construction of the elevator, and these cases were left over after the work had been completed. The shock of the explosion was felt for several miles.
