OUR PRAYER

God of our fathers at whose call
We now before Thy footstool fall;
Whose grace hath made our Empire strong,
Through love of right, and hate of wrong,
In this dark hour we plead with Thee,
For Britain's cause on land and sea.

Not for the lust of war we fight,
But for the triumph of the right;
The strife we hate is on us thrust,
Our aims are pure, our cause is just;
So strong in faith we plead with Thee
For Britain's cause on land and sea.

If wounded in the dreadful fray,
Be Thou their comfort and their stay;
If dying, may they in their pain,
Behold the Lamb for sinners slain;
In this dark hour we plead with Thee,
For Britain's sons on land and sea.

And soon, O Blessed Prince of Peace,
Bring in the days when war shall cease,
And men and brothers shall unite,
To fill the world with love and light;
Meanwhile, O Lord, we plead with Thee,
For Britain's cause on land and sea.

TEACHING TECHNOLOGY.

Edmonton's Experiment In an Old Car Barn Bears Fruit.

Northwestern enterprise is pretty well summed up in the farthest north technical school in Canada, which is located at Edmonton, the farthest north point for a large number of things in civilization. But latitude 55 does not explain the value of this quite remarkable and sudden development of technical education. Schools have always been to the forefront in that part of the country. Some of the earliest civic struggles in Edmonton were over schools in the days when "Dick" Secord, the fur-buyer, was an Edmonton schoolmaster. The latest variation on the theme is the institution which teaches four hundred young folk in the two Edmontons how to grapple with modern problems unhandicapped by merely academic training.

A year ago technical education in the capital of Alberta was in a crude, experimental stage, ready for rapid expansion into something better. At that time technics were taught in public and high school rooms, which were all overcrowded. A new technical school was needed; also a new technical chief instructor. The latter was got from the east, in the person of W. L. Richardson, B.A., then superintendent of manual training in Toronto. The former was secured at his recommendation, in the use of an old abandoned car barns, containing a floor space of 14,000 square feet. Ten thousand dollars were spent in fitting up the barns. Twenty-five thousand dollars was spent in equipment, including electric machinery, ten down-draft forges, five engine lathes, a shaper, a milling machine, a drill press, mortiser, jointer, variety and band saws, ten speed lathes, a Gordon printing press, a lever paper-cutter, wire stitcher, an assortment of type, paraphernalia for the cooking, dressmaking and draughting departments, science laboratory and academic instruction. Civic and citizen enthusiasm was at the back of this big expenditure, which will probably be duplicated on the south side of the river until such time as a general new institute can be built to house all the equipment. Eight private citizens gave extension lectures in various phases of manufacturing and business, such as Pure Milk Supply, Modern House Planning, and How to Make and Save Money. One firm presented the school with a complete engine, boiler and pump, for the stationary engineering class. Another citizen donated a fine compound microscope for the chemical department.

Most of this has been the spirited evolution of six months. It is all due to the remarkable interest taken by the citizens in educational matters which so far as technical education goes is controlled by a committee of the School Board.—Canadian Courier.

LONG-LIVED JUDGES.

Ontario Bench Seems to Supply Conditions For Longevity.

As one of the clubs much favored of the legal fraternity, the illness which prompted the late S. H. Blake to retire from private practice for a nine-year occupancy of the Bench, was being discussed, and the fact that he was then moved to take up firm work again, and so long continued it in good health. Much interesting matter concerning the seeming wholesomeness of judicial life was evoked among the legal groups. The great Canadian counsel and chancellor, recently called away, achieved the good age of 79.

Judge Morgan, though billed for retiral from County Court activities by the generous age limit of 75, is only 76 and good for a long time at his Surrogate duties. Judges McLaren and Garrow of the High Court are 72 and 71, respectively. Chief Justice Meredith—whose amused eye upon recent provincial events would make a live newspaper picture, if enlarged, for judges have no politics, you know—is 74 and capable of the best work of his life, as witness his burdensome task on the Workmen's Compensation Act. Chief Justice R. M. Meredith, is 67, but looks a decade less. Chief Justice Falconbridge is a year older. In January next Sir William Mulock will be 71. Sir John Boyd, Chancellor of Ontario, is yet another proof that the Bench atmosphere really is a longevity tonic—being 77. Then there is Mr. Justice Britton—81 upon his birthday next September—"still going strong."

In fact, long lives are not unusual in Ontario court annals. Further attestation to this becomes patent from a casual glance through Osgoode Hall records. Sir John Robinson, who lived 72 years, was for 33 years Chief Justice of Ontario. Sir Henry Strong was as long on the Bench as vice-chancellor, judge or chief justice. Mr. Justice Gwynne, at the age of 88, had also served the like period. If Chief Justice Spragge's judicial service were counted from his appointment as Master, June 2, 1837, until his decease, April 20, 1884, at 76, it would exceed the above by 13 years. Chief Justice McLean was on the Bench from March, 1837, until 1868, and lived 74 years. Chief Justice Campbell also attained the same age, but only 18 of it was on the Bench. Chief Justice Draper lived 76 years and held judicial office from 1847 till 1877. Sir John Hagarty from 1856 until his resignation in 1897 gave service, and reached 82. Chief Justice Armour presided in our courts from 1877 until his promotion to the Supreme Court, 1902, 25 years thereafter. Senator Gowan, styled by the literary Davin, "one of the noblest and most interesting figures in our political life," served 41 years on the County Court Bench prior to that. Judge Wm. Elliott of Middlesex County, who retired in 1904, had completed 35 years of honorable achievement.

Perhaps fittingly after the recent "spirited" spell, the list may be closed with the late Hon. Sir Oliver Mowat. When he passed away April 19, 1903, he was 83 years old, and, since his call in Trinity term, 1841, had been a barrister, judge, or crown officer for a period nearly equal to two ordinary generations. His history is interwoven with that of Ontario's development.

Cold Comfort.

There is a certain hotel up in British Columbia that has a reputation for being reasonably cold. It is a frame structure, and the walls are thin and shaky. One morning during a blizzard two guests who had been there the night before came out of their rooms on opposite sides of the hall. The first man said:

"Whew! I'm nearly frozen! I never was so cold in my life. I slept with all my clothes on and everything else piled on me, but I'm frosted through!"

"Same here," said the other. "I was on the windward side of this hut. I put on my buffalo coat over my clothes, but I don't think I'll ever get warm."

They went down to the hotel office. There, huddled over the stove, was a stage driver who had lost his way and been out all night. His hair and whiskers were lumps of ice. His fur hat was frozen to his head. He shivered and shook with the cold, though he was practically sitting on the stove. He looked like a human icicle. The two guests looked at him for a minute. Then one of them asked:

"Which room did you have, partner?"

A Matter of Nerve.

Arthur Ellis, the official executioner, presided in a most calm and efficient manner at the taking-off of a young Italian murderer in Montreal a few weeks ago, the execution taking place at Montreal's fine new jail at Bordeaux, about seven miles from the city. An hour later, while standing on the station platform awaiting the train, which would take him back to the city, Ellis observed a man walk leisurely across the track while the incoming train was some fifty or seventy-five feet away. After watching the pedestrian until assured that he was out of danger, Ellis turned away with something like a shudder, and exclaimed: "By Jove, that fellow has nerve! Now, I wouldn't dare do a thing like that!"

Too Much For Quebec.

The Sunday laws of the Province of Quebec are not nearly so strict as those of Ontario, but they have a limit, and this was reached when an enterprising Montreal dealer in a horizon subdivision announced an auction sale of five hundred lots for Sunday afternoon, prospective purchasers being transported to the scene by special train. The crowd was assembled, and the auctioneer was just stepping upon the block when a telegram forbidding the sale was received from the Assistant Attorney-General of the province, acting upon direct orders from Sir Lomer Gouin.
