ON THE MAIN STREET

with FORD MOYNES

A family tree is looked on as quite important by millions of people and there are equally as many millions who never give a single thought to what particular branch of the old family tree they have sprung from.

Family history can be extremely interesting. A few weeks ago "Main Street" was questioned regarding the family of William Kenny V.S. who years ago practised in Lindsay.

A member of the Kenny Clan, Miss Norma Kenny of Cobden, Ontario, wished to secure some historical information. Facts were forthcoming this week.

Well over a half century ago, Dr. Kenny had a place of business and his domicile in one of Lindsay's oldest frame buildings, which was located at the north west corner of William Street and Peel Street.

The family of the late C. L. Baker also lived for some time in part of this building, living upstairs with an outside stairway leading to William Street.

Later the structure was occupied by the Orange Lodge, and Ernie Moore, tailor, occupied the west part of the ground floor. For a time Lloyd Davis operated a Canadian Tire Store in the same building. Today a modern new building owned and occupied by Farmer's Mutual Insurance is located on the lot.

Word has been received and will be passed on to Miss Kenny that the Kenny family comprised a daughter and two sons, Roy and Art, with the latter now a resident of Detroit. Any other information for the "blue book" received will be appreciated. It is understood that the late James Lauder was a relative of the Kenny family.
