Owen Sound's beautiful summer hotel, the King's Royal, has, it is understood, been sold to the Toronto Wreckage Co., and two gentlemen of that company are now in town completing the deal. The company's representatives are down at the hotel this morning looking over the premises, and while nothing official is forthcoming up to the time of going to press, it is expected that the deal will go through. It is with reluctance that the Owen Sound Park Co. have taken the act now in progress, and every effort was made by Capt. J. K. McLauchlan, manager of the hotel company, to have the building put to some useful purpose. It was thought that the Government could use the hotel as an hospital for returned soldiers, and this was brought to the notice of the Military Hospital Board. All efforts to dispose of the property were of no avail, and the next few weeks will probably see the demolition of what once promised to be a valuable asset to Owen Sound's summer attractions by auction.—Advertiser.

Any "home merchant" who isn't awake and fails to tell the people about his wares, should read this startling statement made by the manager of a big Toronto mail order house recently. "We have a bureau whose duty is to read the country newspapers. There is not a paper of any consequence in our territory we do not get. The bureau looks over these papers and when we find a town where the merchants do not advertise in the local paper, we immediately flood that section with our literature. It always brings results far in excess of the same effort put forth in territory where the local merchats use their local paper."

The infectious disease of blackleg broke out amongst the cattle at Tara vicinity early last winter and Dr. Thomas, who treated the disease, checked the spread of same until this spring when it broke out again and about 26 head have died during the past few weeks. About 12 farmers' stocks were affected.

Some good speckled trout are being pulled out from the Sheppard preserve at Primrose. O Carlaw caught a 2¾ lb. beauty on May 1. One morning recently W. Brett, T. Whalley and Dr. Davis went out from town and caught 13 fine specimens that weighed within a few ounces of 8 lbs.—Shelburne Economist.

TENTED LIFE in the ROCKIES

(1) Alpine Club in Yoho Park. (2) Around the Camp Fire. (3) Chinese Cooks on the Job. (4) Tents in Yoho Park.

FOR sheer joy of living, for the most complete emancipation from the bondage of civilized life, give me the tented life in the Canadian Pacific Rockies.

Only a bit of cotton between one and the stars, only a spread of balsam between you and mother earth. But the world is yours, the wonder-world of mountains, of glaciers, of glittering snow fields, of singing brooks and roaring rivers, of valleys brilliant with flowers, of sleeping lakes of ever-changing colors.

With a guide, a pack and a saddle pony, a supply of food and a tent or two, we leave Banff or Field and face the alluring trail and the untrodden vales. Miles and years behind are cities and streets and trains and creditors and sky scrapers and even war. After hours of trail journeying, over as many kinds of paths as you can count on fingers and toes, the first camp is struck and none too soon, for the tenderfoot who hasn't been in the saddle for some years. Bill chooses an ideal spot as if by instinct—a clean bit of forest, a high and dry level area, a near-by stream, a pasture run for the ponies and firewood for the burning pile.

Then one enters upon the tented life and a rare life it is. How tiny the little tent in the world of hills, but it is Home for the time. No sooner is it pegged down than Bill has by magic started a roaring fire going and set free the most delicious of odors for the epicurean feast that soon follows. A fallen tree serves as a mahogany table, a stump or two as upholstered chairs and what more would you have? We actually can get along without finger bowls or napkins. Could a cannibal be greedier than we are, as the bacon and the bread and the prunes disappear and the black old tea pot never runs dry. Then the camp fire! What witchery in the erratic flames with which the mountain winds are playing, what thrills of physical well-being as we fire-worship. Men purr like well-fed cats and are unashamed. Then the camp fire symposium: the tales, true and less true, the singing, classic and otherwise, and such good fellowship as is rare!

So to bed. Three in a row. The centre sleeper in his sleeping bag looks like a stuffed giant, the rest of us are content with the warm Hudson's Bay blankets of ample folds. No, we didn't sleep much the first night, but the change of life and environment had been too sudden, but wait for the other nights. Oblivion waits on the campers until the morning wash in the ice cold stream makes a complete awakening. And what a day it is, rarer than any poetic day in June in the other part of the world where men crowd together. Trails and paths invite exploration on every hand, mountain slopes say, come over and climb us for the panorama we will reveal. Wild life is revealed at times, for it is the haunt of big and small game—bear, mountain goat and sheep, porcupine, marmot, ptarmigan, eagle. The ear is thrilled with the songs of singing streams and tumbling cascades and reverberating avalanches. Truly is it a marvel world, and the fleeting life therein, in a little tent, makes one of the happiest experiences of life and one of its happiest memories as well.
