GUY ORR

Thirty-three Years Ago

Mr. Wm. Guy, of Maxwell, has shown us a literary curiosity in the shape of a little book of poetry, of 32 pages, printed by S. L. M. Luke, of Durham, in the year 1863 for one A. G. Churchill The little book is a directory of the town of Durham and the stage route between that place and Collingwood It will be interesting reading to some of our residents. It is interesting to note that of all the hotels mentioned only one is at present kept by the proprietors mentioned by Mr. Churchill, and that veteran caterer to the public is Mr. A. Munshaw of this place After dealing for 19 pages with the town of Durham the writer starts on his tour to Collingwood, and of Priceville speaks as follows:

ALEX. McDONALD. importer of Dry-goods, Groceries, &c, proprietor of a Grist-mill and Saw-mill at Priceville, 10 miles east of Durham.

His saw-mill makes boards and the grist mill affords
The genuine staff of your lives,
And in his fine store there's a thousand things more,
To dress up your daughters and wives,
Keep good boots and shoes, and fine crockery too,
Nails, groceries, dry goods and glass,
Spices, pepper, and teas, that come over the seas,
Goods, staple and fancy each class.

E. B McMELLAN, keeps British Hotel at Priceville, 10 miles east of Durham.

Keeps British Hotel, at the ring of the bell
His maidens will bring on the roast
His porter will serve, and his steward will carve,
And the hostler you find at the post,
Your team he will lead to the water and feed,
His bar holds good brandy and wine,
Where the people can joke at pleasure and smoke,
His lodgings are lovely and fine.

A. McARTHUR, keeps the Wellington Hotel, 10 miles east of Durham.

The hostler will tend and the landlord will send
Your choice of all drinks to your room,
His sitting rooms fine, and the rooms where they dine,
And lodgings like roses in bloom,
Where the farmer with wheat, and the merchant will meet,
The trader, the drover, and all,
Its the traveller's home, and the sports men that roam,
The Member and clergy will call.

A. N YEOMAN, Postmaster and Issuer of Marriage Licenses.

He will charter in fact royal lovers to act
At the altar of solemn decree,
All men that take wife or get married for life,
He will license at once for the fee,
Love letters that's queer, he will mail to your dear,
Newspaper and letters all kinds,
Six mails in each week, if sent and you seek,
In his office and you will certainly find.

AARON MUNSHAW, keeps the Flesherton Hotel on the Durham road, at the crossing of the Toronto line, where there is a mill, machinery, and two stores.

It's an excellent stand and the hostler's on hand
To water, to curry and feed;
Tobacco, cigar, he keeps in his bar,
And charming good liquors indeed,
His lodgings are clean and fit for the Queen,
The hostess herself will appear,
Will you take tea or coffee? says she,
With cream and white sugar, or clear.

R. HASKET, keeps the Beaver River Hotel.

His hostler indeed, will water and feed,
His driving shed's open to all.
Give the landlord the wink and he'll bring you the drink,
Selecting the kind that you call.
Good lodgings likewise, and table supplies
And all that once call call again.
Young guests of the ball, wedding parties and all,
And great business men will step in.

[Mr. Hasket was the father of the Haskets of Markdale. His little hostelry was a log building five miles east of Flesherton, and stood within a few rods of where Mr. Phillips now has his sawmill.—ED. ADVANCE.]

J. MAXWELL, hotel keeper and postmaster. The office is kept separate from all other business, and is situated between Collingwood and Durham, at the place of exchange of stages, light freight, mails and passengers, where there is one church now building, one school house, one store and one blacksmith shop. The people have established the title of the place, Maxwell, to immortalize the name of the above mentioned landlord, who keeps a good house well furnished.

In centre of farms and grain growing charms,
Where the broad gravel road goes along,
Where two stages meet and passengers greet.
His house is a home for the throng.
Keeps attendants to wait on nobility great,
The fountain of banquet his bar,
His table's a feast, fit for lords of the East,
And his lodgings tell volumes of care.

J. GAMEY, Treasurer of the Township of Osprey, and County Constable for Grey, Worshipful Master of the Loyal Orange Temperance Lodge, No. 1085.

In these annals of fame is recorded his name,
That others in future may read,
The silver and gold of the township, untold,
He holds for safe keeping indeed,
And without neglect he must sell and collect,
And summonses serve in his ride.
To give honor due to the Orange and blue,
He's their worshipful master and guide.

[We would remark here that Mr. Gamey still occupies the position of honor and trust that he did in 1863,—ED. ADVANCE]

W. GUY, blacksmith, irons carriages and makes all kinds of farming tools.

He heats in the fire, sets sleigh shoes and tire,
Makes washer, bolts, linch pins, and skeins,
King bolts with broad head, wheel barrows, bob sleighs,
Pins, clevice rings, staples and chains.
He can shoe kicking nags, steers, oxen, and stags,
Mares, geldings, and stallions, and mules.
Makes wedges and frows, bars cant hooks and hoes,
And every description of tools.

SUTHERLAND & BOWES, keep general store Groceries, Crockery, Dry goods, Hardware, Glass, &c., in great varieties and in great abundance; all kinds of commodities bought and sold here, and will pay more than Collingwood prices for wheat, barley, oats, etc.

Not to quote further from the rhyme, we will give a few of the references to men and places.

J. LEOPARD, master builder in Osprey. His address is Artemesia, 2nd line east of Toronto Line.

J. OGLEVIE, stage driver from Collingwood to Maxwell's, and B. T. Warner drives from Durham to Maxwell's where they meet to exchange passengers, the former driving a span of roans and the latter a span of bays.

J. Campaign kept the Glencore hotel 7 miles from Singhampton.

A BELL was then, as now, Clerk of the Township of Nottawasaga.

The description of Singhampton of that day would answer well the description of the place to-day.

In Memoriam

Lines on the Death of the Late Minnie Lawrence

Minnie has left us for a while,
And tho' she's gone we miss her smile,
Her cheerful face, her ready hand,
To help wherever love made demand.

Her patient spirit here on earth
Kept gloom away, and oft brought mirth,
When those less patient would grow sad,
Nor think life held aught to make glad.

Though weak in frame, and oft depressed
With pain, which was a frequent guest,
Yet her brave heart it faltered not,
But bore it all and murmured not.

She chose in life the better part,
And strove to keep it in her heart;
And thus like fountains bubbling o'er,
We saw it in the smiles she wore.

And knew that she had happiness,
And peace and love that few possess,
And others felt the power she had
To cheer them up when they were sad.

Oh, parents, sisters, brothers, friends,
You feel the sting that death e'er lends,
But lift your head, and dry your tears,
Dispel your doubts, and chase your fears

While she was here you tried to ease
Her every pain, and to release
Her from distress of every kind,
And keep her in a peaceful mind.

Now she has gone to be with those
Bright kindred spirits in repose,
Where rest the pure and true of earth,
To wait the resurection birth.

Be comforted and from her life
Take courage now to meet the strife
That all in life, must battle through,
And conquer, if they would prove true.
