County and District

F. S. Cressman, merchant of Hanover, has compromised with his creditors at 35 cents on the dollar.

Forty-five auctioneer's licenses were issued in Grey County during the past year, affording a revenue of $540.

Mr R. J. Merriam of Chatsworth had several fingers badly lacerated. It was the buzz saw again.

The store and residence of M. Hiles, Williamsford, was burned one day last week. The stock was valued at $4000 and nothing was saved. Mr. Hiles also lost $200 in money. Insurance on stock, $2000; on store, $600

On Wednesday Robt Thompson was coming down the mountain west of Collingwood with a load of wood, when his horses became unmanageable and ran at breakneck speed down the steep road They meet Mrs. J. A. Castor in a cutter going up the mountain. Her horse was killed instantly and the cutter smashed to atoms, though strange to say Mrs. Castor escaped comparatively unhurt.

Before the stock of F. X. Messner, of Formosa, was sold Friday at Walkerton, the insolvent addressed the audience and asked them, and particularly Messrs Schwartz & Fedy, not to bid against him By adopting this course he would get a chance to earn something to pay the premiums on his policies and finally pay all his debts. The bidding started at 40 cents and advanced rapidly one cent at a time. After a while the bids dropped to a quarter of a cent advance until 75 cents was bid when Mr. Schwartz who was the opposition bidder, said, "Let him have it," and it was knocked down to the Messrs. Messner.

C. D. Ballard, one of the alleged Melancthon conspirators, has written a letter to the press. After advising newspaper reporters to keep better hours the the letter reads: "And there is lots of decent, honest men in Melancthon, and there is plenty more that is neither decent or honest. But men that I will stake my last dollar on when it came to swaring, would sware crucked to screen themselves It seems the rule to load a mule for all he can draw. Well, there is danger that that mule might make up his mind not to be driven any further. Then Mr. Driver would come in for a small portion of the load."

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 13.—Samuel Hantley, a married man with three children, living at No. 227 Land's avenue, was killed at McDonnell's rolling mills, Sunnyside, near Toronto, in a most horrible manner. He was working at the rolls when a bar of red hot iron was thrown out. It struck him above the the knee and passed entirely through the leg, burning him terribly. Doctors were hurriedly summoned, but he died in half an hour. He fainted when the iron entered his leg, and never recovered consciousness.

At the adjourned inquest on the body of Edward Fenton the only evidence given was by Dr. Barr, who held the post mortem examination. The doctor's evidence did not throw any light upon the cause of Fenton's death. The body was charred beyond recognition, nothing but the trunk remaining, the arms and legs having been burnt off. The brain, lungs, stomach and liver were so affected by the fire that not much could be learned from them. If Edward Fenton met his death by foul play, then the fire most effectually covered up the tracks made by the atrocious fiends. The inquest was again adjourned at the request of the Crown until the 23rd inst.

Probably the oldest woman in Canada died right here in Arthur tp., only a few miles from Mt. Forest, on Saturday last, in the person of Mrs. Cushen, of the Kerry settlement, on the 9th con. She was 115 years old and she lived with her son, who is now an old man of over 70. In order to make sure of the old lady's exact age her friends wrote recently to the place where she was born in Ireland and the great age of 115 years is given as thoroughly reliable. She was blind for a couple of yeaars previous to her death, but before losing her sight, it is said, saw her fifth generation—a most remarkable record. Her funeral took place on Monday.—Mt. Forest Rep.

Alexander McLean, a man about 80 years of age, living in his house alone in Garafraxa, not far from Monkland mills, Fergus, was suffocated. A neighbor on entering the house found the kitchen floor burned all round the stove, the oven of which had fallen through the burned hole. The fire was still burning slowly, the house was full of smoke and the old man was lying unconscious on his bed. A doctor was sent for and every effort was made to resuscitate him, but without avail, as he died without having recovered sufficiently to tell anything about what had happened. He was a Highland Scotchman, and although he lived in Fergus for over forty years, Gaelic was the language that he could speak most readily. His wife died a few months ago, since which time he has lived alone.

The following paragraph form the pen of "Don" in Saturday Night sums up the situation as correctly as could any human. "The Canadian Press Association is in session in Toronto this week, and it has occurred to me that these men, these editors, magnetized by direct contact with the whole people, could give excellent testimony on many a knotty point There is no man in a community so intimately informed of the working of its social machinery and so free to read the motives that underlie men's actions, as the editor. It has often been said that an editor deserves credit, not so much for that which he prints as for that which he refuses to print. Only those in business know how true this is, and how often it is necessary for the editor to say "No" to men of considerable local influence. There is no one thing, perhaps, that contributes so much to the success of a newspaper man as the ability to say "Yes" or "No" in the proper place and with the kindliness that makes or retains a friend. Indeed, this applies to any line of business. It is said that ninety-five per cent. of those who go into business prove to be failures, and it has long been held that a great many of those who fail do so because they are unable to say "No," either graciously or at all. We are all aware that socially, professionally and in business life the inability to say "No" has wrecked many a brilliant future and it applies to women as well as to men."

A Great Offer.

Grey's Warden

Mr. James Allan, the newly elected warden of Grey, is one of five brothers who, with their parents, settled in Egremont away back in the 50's. The father was for many years a justice of the peace, an elder in the Presbyterian church, and a most worthy citizen Four of the sons, John, James, David and Thomas became teachers, the three former after several years at the desk, becoming farmers. Thomas, the well known principal of Durham Model School, is still in harness. William never took to teaching and never aspired to any public office till his friends forced him to the front as a Patron candidate in the last election. Not so James. Back in the 70's, nearly 25 years ago, he began to take an interest in municipal affairs, and his ability, natural and acquired, led to his election to the municipal council of Egremont, of which we suppose he was a member longer than any one man. His election was always noted for an overwhelming vote in his own ward, and only once was he defeated for a year, and that by a small majority. The position of deputy reeve gave him County Council experience, and as chairman of the County Property Committee and in other ways he proved a most useful member. His new position is a tribute to his ability. In politics he has always been a Conservative, if we except the support he gave his brother as Patron. In religion he is classed as a Presbyterian, He takes a warm interest in Farmers' Institute and Agricultural Society meetings, and is in demand as a platform speaker. "Jim" is one of the most sociable of men, and has never taken the strong ground on temperance and other questions that his brothers have done. In the late election his large vote in his own township proves his popularity.—Grey Review.
