Gets One Year

As the culmination of a case which has been before the courts and attracted extensive interest for some months, James S. Robertson, a well known Owen Sounder received a sentence of one year in the Ontario reformatory. When the case came before Judge Sutherland Monday morning, Robertson, who had been out on bail, received the above sentence. The charge originally came up for hearing before Judge Sutherland on June the 10th 1916 and was that of misappropriating funds subscribed to buy Torhnto property. At that time Robertson pleaded guilty but sentence was postponed until the 12th of January last to permit him to make restitution. On that date through his counsel, Mr. H. G. Tucker, application was made for a further extension of time to Feb. 12th. When the promised restitution failed to materialize at the promised date, Mr. Robertson asked for a further extension of time promising to assign further securities which he possessed but which were considered of a doudtful value. Sentence was passed as stated above, Mr. W. H. Wright acting for the private prosecutor, Mr. T. H. Dyer County Crown Attorney for the Crown. The case is the result of speculation in real estate in which Robertson became heavily involved and only succeeded in his efforts to extricate himself from his difficulties —Advertiser.

Fawcett—Ranger

On the 17th inst. at Gallowtree gate Congregational church by the Rev. J. R. Legge. M. A., Pte. E. I. Fawcett, Canadian Highlander, of Kimberley, Ont., to Winifred Rose Ranger, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ranger of 111 Evington Road, Leicester.

Joseph J. Kelley, of Orangeville, was knocked down by a street car in Toronto a few days ago and the front wheel passed over his hand, cutting off three fingers and a thumb He was taken to the hospital.

With cattle selling at the highest price in many years, Mr. Henry Hossfeld, the well-known stock breeder of Carrick, has a grade cow which rivals the famous goose that laid the golden eggs. On three occasions during the last twenty-six months this cow has given birth to twin calves. All six were dandies and are shaping up into good beef cattle. With live beef selling around the hundred dollar mark. Mr. Hossfeld should have no difficulty in figuring a profit on this cow's progeny.—Walkerton Telescope.

An Edna, Sask., man is wondering why his wife telegraphed her congratulations and best wishes in response to a telegram of his. He had engaged a berth ahead of time and was comfortably fixed. At one of the stations an aged woman boarded the cars, but the berths were all taken. The Edna man's chivalry came to her rescue, and he gave the old lady his birth, while he sat up all night in the smoking compartment. The next moaning he sent his wife a telegram, which when it reached her read as follows :—"Gave birth to an old woman last night. Am all in."

While in the act of carrying an armful of wood into his house Patrick Dillon, a real estate dealer of Meatord, dropped dead of heart failure. Deceased was 58 yrs of age and has resided in Meaford more than 30 years. A widow and six children, two sons of his being at the front are left to mourn the loss of a loving husband and fond father.

For the first time in long centuries the eagles have this winter abandoned that lofty spur of the Suabian Alps upon which the Castle of Hohenzollern is perched, towering some thousands of feet above the surrounding valleys. The original name of the Castle Hohenzollern was Schwartz Adlers Horst (the Eerie of the Black Eagle) and edicts without number assured the eagles who have made their home on these crags for 1,000 years or more from all harm and interference. No one ever disturbed them. They have been preserved and protected in the most rigorous fashion. That they should at this juncture have mysteriously deserted the cradle of the Hohenzollerns is regarded throughout the length and breadth of Germany as an evil omen for the Hohenzollerns and for the Kaiser.

Mr. Milton Huber, a popular young man of Hanover, met with a distressing accident in Knechtel's factory recently, when he got his right hand in a machine and had part of his four fingers severed.

Death came suddenly to Wm. Dyer, a a locomotive driver on the G. T. R. one night recently. He was in the siding at Norval, waiting for the up train to pass at eight o'clock. He had been working at the ash pan with his fireman, when he dropped the work saying "I feel sick," and climbed into his cab and there on his seat the fireman found him dead a few moments later.

A young owl fell down the chimney in the office of the Ontario Farmers' Weather Mutual Co. in Grand Valley, crawled along the stove pipes and down onto the damper in the pipe above the stove. Upon turning the damper in the pipe the owl dropped down and flew out of the door of the stove. The fire had been allowed to die down before the noise of the owl in the pipes was heard. The bird was kept for a few days before being given away.

The Burks Falls Arrow says it enjoys the unique distinction of being the only newspaper in the districts of Muskoka and Parry Sound which is represented overseas in the great war. Both the editor's sons—Lieut. J. H. Fawcett and Pte. R. Cecil Fawcett—are with the colors, and no less than four former members of the Arrow staff, viz. Sergt. Clarence Starr, Pte. Harold Peck, Pte. Hugh Boyd and Pte. W. R. Fawcett, were also in the big fight, but were so severely wounded that they will probably be sent back to Canada. Indeed Sergt. Starr has already returned. To give money for patriotic purposes has called for very little self-denial in most instances, but to risk one's life for others is a very different matter.

Americans in Canada

THE process of the establishment of branches of American industrial concerns within the borders of the Dominion of Canada has been going on for a good many years—ever since it became apparent that no political party was likely to modify very seriously the "protective" character of the country's fiscal policy. It might reasonably have been expected that the shock of war would put a stop, temporarily at least, to this process of peaceful penetration; but the opposite has been the case. Even since the recovery of capital from its paralysis, eight months or so after the war began, the establishment of American branches in Canada has been going on with greater energy and determination than before, and investigation has shown that the war, instead of discouraging such adventure, has afforded new reasons to justify it.

Speaking broadly, the American firms which have established themselves in Canada during the past twelve or fifteen months have been actuated by one or both of two main considerations. Either they have had an eye on the Canadian domestic market, and have regarded the present as a favorable opportunity for a campaign in it because of their own abnormal cash reserves, and the exceptional prosperity and activity of the Dominion; or (this is the explanation in the majority of cases) they have had an eye not only to the Canadian market but also to the vast territory of the Entente Allies, and are convinced that in the fiscal arrangements which will follow the conclusion of peace, no neutral country will receive "most-favored-nation" treatment from any of the Allied countries.

Canada, combining the economic advantages of the American continent, with its wealth of raw material and of skilled labor, with the market advantages of a member of the belligerent Entente, is the natural basis of operations for an American concern with designs upon European markets. This, according to the industrial commissioners of various Canadian cities, and of the Canadian Pacific Railway, is the main motive in inducing most of the recent American branch establishments in Canada, and is likely to bring to Canada within the next few years industrial capital running to many hundreds of millions.

American concerns which have established plants in Canada since the beginning of 1915, is an imposing evidence of the attractive power of the Canadian market and of Canadian export possibilities. It should be added that all of the establishments are substantial plants, built for meeting a large business and for carrying on, not merely a sales agency or an assembling process, but practically the entire process of production from the purchased raw material to the finished article.

One of the first American products to meet with an avowed policy of fiscal discouragement in Free Trade England, as a result of the war and its effect upon trade balances, was the automobile. The establishment of branches of American automobile concerns in Canada has already been going on for some years, owing to the great growth in Canadian consumption of the article and the popularity of American brands. But the European situation has given a tremendous impetus to the movement. Existing plants have been vastly enlarged, and three new and important plants have been undertaken, those of the Maxwell Motors at Windsor, Ontario, the Chalmers Motor Company at Walkerville, Ontario, and the Chevrolet Motor Company at Oshawa, Ontario. This is exclusive of the acquisition and enlargement of Canadian-owned plants by American firms for the manufacture of American brands of cars.

One of the biggest industrial undertakings of the year was that of the of an immense plant in Hamilton, Ontario. The famous packing house of Proctor & Gamble Company, the proprietors of Ivory Soap and of sundry other soap and cottonseed oil products, who have commenced the erection Libbey, McNeill & Libby has established itself in Hamilton, Ontario (which city, it will be noted, is a favorite with American industries owing to its combination of cheap power and good labor supply with the best of shipping facilities). The Flint Varnish & Color Company has put up a branch factory at Toronto, Ontario; and the Link Belt Company is locating in the same city. Sherer & Gillett, makers of store counters, are establishing at Guelph, Ontario. The Maple Leaf Condensing Company, a Detroit concern, is at Chesterville, Ontario.

The number of concerns establishing in the Province of Quebec has been small compared with those of Ontario, but the present labor situation, which is much more favourable in Quebec, is likely to correct that tendency to some extent. An important asset to the industries of Sherbrooke, Quebec, is that of Kayser & Company, the famous manufacturers of silk gloves, stockings, and other articles. The Aetna Explosive Company, at Drummondville, Quebec, has been improperly regarded as a war industry; it is so for the time being, but its immense plant has been designed so as to be applicable to the manufacture of dyes when the explosive business falls off. A rumor, which appears to have good foundation, though not officially confirmed, asserts that one of the great American chemical and explosives concerns has made all preparations for the establishment of a plant for the production of nitrates from atmospheric nitrogen at one of the hitherto undeveloped powers of Quebec Province.

Several American concerns already operating in Canada have found that their existing plants are not equal to the demands which they anticipate. The Dominion Sugar Company, which is largely financed by American sugar-refining capital, is adding a big plant at Chatham, Ontario, to its existing buildings at Wallaceburg in the same province. The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company is removing from small premises at Bowmanville, Ontario, to an immense property which it has bought at New Toronto, Ontario.

These examples, all of them being enterprises undertaken long after Canada's participation in the war and her financial sacrifices for that cause were known and allowed for, are convincing evidence that the progressive manufacturers of the United States have perfect confidence in Canada as a field for industrial investment. As most of them are looking for an export trade, it would appear that they are satisfied that production costs in Canada will not be materially altered after the war, either as regards labor supply, cost of living, or burdens of taxation. Mr. Graham W. Curtis, Industrial Agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, stated recently that he had found American business men greatly impressed by the showing of financial American confidence in, and comprehension of, Canada, was greater than strength made by the Dominion since the war, and that undoubtedly at any other previous date.

C.P.R. Military Medal Hero

Corporal Ralph G. Murrow, who for four years previous to the outbreak of war was in the Passenger Department, C.P.R., Liverpool, has won the Military Medal.

Corporal Murrow joined the K.L.R. the day war was declared and went to France in February 1915. Before the war he was a well-known member of the Harrowby Football Club and it is interesting to record the fact that the act which won for him the coveted medal was performed in the rescue of a club mate, A. H. Robertson who had been seriously wounded Corporal Murrow picked up his companion and carried him some 500 yards under a heavy fire to the British lines.
