A Successful Organizer.

Mr. S. A. Armstrong, who for many years has been Assistant Provincial Secretary in charge of the hospitals and prisons of Ontario, has been transferred to Ottawa to become Director of the Military Hospitals Commission of Canada. Under Hon. W. J. Hanna Mr. Armstrong has had in hand the important work of prison reform in Ontario along with the reorganization of the hospitals for the insane, and was instrumental in the development of the large industries connected with the reformatory at Guelph, which with the adjoining farm has enabled the Province to carry on a work of prison reform that has made Ontario a name to be conjured with the world over. In becoming Director of Military Hospitals Mr. Armstrong will bring to bear upon this important branch of Canada's war organization the experience that has been so successful in Ontario. Not only will the efficiency of hospital management be increased, but the benefits of the most approved methods of treatment will be available for the soldiers who return to Canada.

A snowbank was used by a thirsty citizen of Stratford as a depository for a bottle of whiskey. It made a complete refrigerator but when he pleaded to being under the influence of liquor and told the court that he had secured a "heel" of a bottle of liquor from a friend who was going through the city, later hiding it in the snow, he left himself open for another charge, that of having liquor in other than his private dwelling house On the first charge he was fined $10 and costs. On the second he also pleaded guilty and was fined $200 and costs, or three months in jail. He is serving the time.

Increased Food Production

In order to assist in meeting the shortage of foodstuffs, due to war conditions and the unfavourable season of 1916, those teachers who are now giving instructions in agriculture and horticulture in the Provincial schools should arrange as far as practicable to grow plants of food value in school gardens and to reduce correspondingly the space hitherto devoted to flowers and decorative shrubs. With the same object in view, the home garden projects should be enlarged and modified and extensive use made of vacant lots and other unoccupied areas. In this way advantage might be taken of the potential labour of boys and girls from eight to fifteen or sixteen, much of which in the ordinary course of events is not utilized.

Inspectors might also take advantage of present conditions to enlarge the scope of agricultural education in Ontario and to demonstrate more fully the important bearing which agriculture has upon the welfare of the people, by using their influence to induce School Boards which have not yet established classes in agriculture to undertake this work and to utilize the school garden or home garden as recommended above.

If, indeed, the urban municipalities in Ontario having a population of from 1000 to 9000 would double the present production of their gardens and poultry yards, and use, as recommended above, the vacant lots and other unoccupied areas, it would increase the food products of Ontario by $10,000,000 at a very conservative calculation.

Boys and girls cannot be expected to fight, but by assisting in increasing the supply of foodstuffs, they also can be of great service.

—R. A. PYNE,
Minister of Education

Useful Brushes.

C.P.R. Solicitor Killed in Action

LIEUT. JAS. MCNAUGHT.

THE Canadian Pacific Railway has lost another of its valued servants at the front. Lieut. Jas. McNaught, a Scotchman by birth, was one of the company's solicitors, with office in Montreal, and his death was recently reported in the casualty list. Lieut. McNaught was one of the most popular officials of the C. P. R. He was born at Walkerburn, Scotland, thirty-three years ago, and came to Canada in 1906, after qualifying as a solicitor in Edinburgh. Shortly after his arrival he joined the law department of the railway company. His abilities were quickly appreciated by those in higher authority, and his efforts were rewarded by a promotion as Assistant Solicitor on Jan. 1st, 1912. It was nearly three years afterwards that Lieut. McNaught was made one of the solicitors of the C. P. R., but when the war broke out, like many other Scotchmen, he had the fighting fever. He commenced his training with the McGill Battalion in the summer of 1915. On Nov 17th, the same year, he went back to Scotland and enlisted for active service in the Royal Scots as a private. He trained all through the winter until June, 1916, when he was selected to take an officer's training course. Lieut. McNaught had no difficulty in qualifying, and in October last he was appointed to the 2nd Batt. Royal Scots, and went to the front about the beginning of December. He was on the Somme front and was killed on January 7th.

If Your Boy Thinks of Enlisting Don't Stand In His Way

It's a big sacrifice for you to give him up; but make that sacrifice that he may face the future with all the advantage of a clear conscience before all men.

Don't weigh him with the handicap of not having gone to help his comrades when they called for his assistance.

Help him to play his part. He'll be a credit to you and a credit to himself.

The 248th Greys is your own Battalion. There's a recruiting office near you.

Mottoes Made In Germany.

The Leipzig Museum is completing a collection of mottoes of the leading German commanders, which is to be published shortly. General von Stein, the new Prussian Minister of War, gives as his motto: "It is more important than all else to bear quietly, to act in silence, and to help unselfishly." Admiral Scheer, commander of the High Seas Fleet, says: "The war aim of the German fleet is the freedom of the seas." Prince Henry of Prussia wrote: "For the right people at the right time the right man in the right quarrel." General von Woyrsch says: "Germany invincible—that is my faith, firm as a rock." Von Bissing, Mackensen, von Beseler, and many other quote Scripture to the effect that they trust in God.

Necklace Worth Fortune.

As the result of five minutes' bidding, which started at £10,000, the sum of £25,600 was paid for a pearl necklace at the great pearl sale conducted by Debenham, Storr and Son, says London Chronicle. The purchaser was a dealer—Mr. S. H. Harris—and he secured what was described in the catalogue as "a matchless necklace of 45 superb pearls of remarkable size, perfect shape, color and match, and of beautiful symmetry of graduation, weighing 917.-96 grs." The collection and matching of the pearls are said to have occupied a period of upwards of 23 years. For other ropes of pearls £9,800, £4,050, £4,600, £5,000, and £3,150 were paid.

Green Uniforms Used.

British hospital surgeons have adopted green uniforms in place of the long-used suits of white. The hospitals also are being fitted in green. The color is said to be less trying to the eyes of both patient and doctor.
