Canadian Flying Corps

Twelve thousand Ontarians who have some knowledge of mechanics will receive during the coming week from the National Service Board, Ottawa, a comprehensive booklet which tells them all about the latest addition to the Canadian forces, the Royal Flying Corps. The information is being sent to these men as a result of their offer to do their share for national service.

It was recently decided that Canada is to have its own flying corps. Not only are the machines to be manufactured and built in this country, but thoroughly experienced air officers and men have arrived from England for the purpose of organizing the corps. In every squadron a considerable number of mechanics are required, and the National Service organization was called upon with a view to obtaining the men required for this work. The records have been gone over to ascertain how many mechanics had filled out National Service cards. In the Province of Ontario cards, 12000 names were found of men whose different mechanical trades showed they would be suitable.

Three thousand mechanics being all that are required, no other cards have as yet been sorted and it is expected that the full quantity should be easily secured in Ontario alone, although, of course, men from other provinces are eligible.

The Royal Flying Corps is called on the battle fronts the eyes of the army. It is considered the corps d'elite of the service and in the British Isles there is a constant waiting list of those who have done their duty at the front and who have applied for transfer to the flying corps. Many Canadians who went overseas with other units have been transferred to its ranks, with the result that Canadian pilots and mechanics have gained most enviable names for themselves and increased the high prestige of Canada as one of the strong arms of the Empire.

For this reason it was decided to have a Canadian corps, and not only have we the best training grounds, with wide areas to practice on or over, but we have everything that goes into the building of an airship. Men who have great adaptability and initiative and mechanical skill are also required and we have the right type.

This last is what is being called for now—mechanics who will work at the squadron headquarters and airdomes, keeping the machines in running order for the pilots, and whose work will be all on the ground. This, however, does not prevent those who engage in this service from joining the aerial branch afterwards if they see fit and are qualified.

Those mechanics who have been rejected for overseas service on account of the strictness of the medical examination, and those whose ties at home have prevented them joining, have now a wonderful opportunity. The medical examination for the Royal Flying Corps is nothing like as strict, nor is it at all necessary that it should be, as there are no heavy kits to carry or long marches to go on, in this service. Moreover, to men who desire a permanent well-paying livelihood after the war, the mechanical end of the air service is the one to adopt, as air transportation in the future will go forward with leaps and bounds. The result will be that those who have a good knowledge of the work, which can be gained in the Royal Flying Corps, will command good salaries and continuous employment.

History always repeats itself, especially in the mechanical trades; it will be the old story over again of the development of the harvester, the bicycle, the electrical industry, and the automobile, when even those who had only a fair but practical knowledge were in great demand and rose to big positions in the managements of such concerns. The Royal Flying Service is this century's mechanical achievement, and combining as it does, daring and skill, it gives every one that has either of these qualifications, one of the few openings in a lifetime, to secure the knowledge and practice that will enable him to serve the Empire now and gain an experience that will be extremely valuable in the future.

Prof. Stephen Leacock of McGill university, Montreal, addressing the Montreal Housewives League at the Royal Victoria College last week, said we are in sight of a terrible food famine, such as the world has never seen. We must at all costs increase our own food supply. We in Canada are fortunately placed. We have boundless resources in land to draw upon. We must see that every available acre and every available day's labor is turned to use. It is gratifying to learn that our Department of Agriculture and our National Service Commission are wide awake to the situation. We must put behind them the force of public opinion and the efforts of individual citizens.

An exchange says:—A man in an Ohio town put a stove in a warehouse where he had a good supply of potatoes. The stove set fire to the building and burned grocery store and a residence as well. The loss will be slight as the potatoes were saved.

Serve Save Produce

EVERY ONE CAN do something for his country

Some can bear arms
Some can produce food
Some can make munitions
Some can give money

It is the privilege of all to help.

YOU CAN SERVE by Fighting—Working—Saving—Giving

This is NATIONAL SERVICE

Are YOU doing your part?

ALL EYES turn now to the Canadian Farmer, for he can render the Empire SPECIAL SERVICE in this sternest year of the war.

But—our farms are badly undermanned—25,000 men are needed on the land.

With insufficient help, the Man on the Land fights an uphill fight to meet the pressing need for Food.

CITY and TOWN can help.

Municipal Councils, Churches and Schools, and other organizations, both of men and women, can render National Service by directing all available labour to the Land.

Farmers themselves can exchange labour. School boys can assist.

Were you raised on a farm? Can you drive a team? Can you handle fork or hoe? If you can't fight, you can produce. Spend the Summer working on the Farm.

Let every man, woman and child in the Dominion who has access to Land, no matter how small the plot, make it produce Food in 1917.
