"Look at that watch," exclaimed a Main Street pedestrian as he stopped in front of a jewellery store window. It was one of the smallest wrist watches ever. "Remember the big old stem winder watch?" was the next question. The cumbersome time piece was at times suspended on a vest button and on one end of the chain was a large watch key. The watch, the key and the vest have long ago disappeared.

What has become of the basso profunda and the songs "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep", "Asleep in the Deep", "The Big Bass Viol", "The Bicycle Built for Two", "Sliding Down Your Cellar Door", and many others.

What has become of the old shaving mug, the shoe spats, the keg of nails, the wooden spiles used on sap trees, the big iron fire pot, the old school slate, the long hat pin, the old spring skates, the cow bell, the jumbo bull's eye candy, the windmill, the barn weather vane, the one cent clay pipe, the tall stove pipe hat, Grandmother's lace bonnet, type lice in the printing shop, brass spittoons, side lamps for carriages, the little brown jug, the tuning fork, the village forge, the bell in the school belfry, the feather tick, the bachelor button, the horsehair sofa, the old family album, the old family Bible, the old high back organ, the walking stilts, and the button hook.
