THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON FOR JULY 7TH.

SAMUEL CALLED OF GOD.—I Sam. III. 1-14.

NOTES.—As the lessons for this quarter are all taken from First Samuel, it will be necessary, for a right comprehension of the train of instruction, for scholar and teacher to read First Samuel through at a sitting before even the first lesson is learned. To understand rightly this third chapter one must first read of Hannah's vow and subsequent consecration of the first born to the service of the Lord. The life of Samuel is a character study especially adapted to the young. And to interest them the incidents must become vivid, as if Samuel lived in the nineteenth century, and not, as is supposed by some, about eleven hundred and fifty years before Christ.——"The child Samuel."—His call came when he was twelve years old, according to Josephus. This was the age of Christ when he went into the Temple.——"The word of the Lord was precious."—Was scarce. There wasn't much of it, and what there was had been perverted and had fallen into decay.—"No open vision."—No authorized communications through divinely appointed prophets. Nothing now was published abroad.——"Was laid down in his place."—Went to sleep in an apartment opening into the court of the Temple. There were rooms, like cloisters, opening into the court all around for the use of the priests.——"Where the ark of the Lord was."—Not in the same room, the holy of holies, but near it. The ark was made of acacia wood, 4 feet by 2 1-2 by 2 1-2. Over it was the golden lid, or mercy seat, and the cherubim. In it were the two tables of stone, the pot of manna and Aaron's rod.——"Samuel did not yet know the Lord."—Recognized his voice, know him personally.——"All that I have spoken."—Read ii, 27-36.—"I will judge his house forever.—The heavy curse God could put on him for his neglect.

Instruction.—Never fail to read the lessons in the Revised Version and thoroughly to compare both versions. Many a thought may come by this method of careful scholar-ship which is within the reach of any student.

The tendency nowadays is to begin the religious training of a child at too late a period. One of the three most eminent ministers of Indiana said that he distinctly remembered what he heard in church at three years of age, and influenced him, he thought, to be the man he was. We were apt to think that a child can wait until he has well passed his kindergarten period. On the contrary, parents should consecrate their little ones by taking the time to say God as they talk to them in Christ mamma; by interesting them in Christ and the Bible characters just as they are interested in how now and by-by. Samuel went to the temple when he was weaned and he stayed there.

There are a very few places in the United States where the word of the Lord is so rare and infrequent that the people don't know enough to lead right lives. The times are not "hard" with us in that regard. Never has there been such diffusion of spiritual truth. The excuse "I knew not" for this or that sin is so flimsy a one that he marks himself as a blind fool who gives it.

It is not hard to imagine that most boys eleven or twelve years old would after the second futile call have turned himself over for a comfortable nap. Our boy in the lesson had such respect for his dim eyed friend who was old and needed help that he would have answered and run as cheerfully at the hundredth call. God will bless the boy or girl who never gets angry or impatient at the care and tenderness the aged rightfully require and too often reluctantly demand of the young.

Gentle rebuke, tender expostulation is not enough when one's son or daughter does a sinful thing. A parent, if anybody, has the chance and the duty of frankly revealing the wrong and of unflinchingly enforcing the moral code. A father is not worthy of the sacred name unless he peremptorily check blaspheming sons and frivolous girls. Eli was justly threatened with punishment for having neglected his parental duty.

Don't look for a call like Samuel's. You won't get it. But your call is just as sure to come in another way. It comes through father or mother, pastor teacher or friend: it comes when you read your Bible or think out in the orchard alone; it comes to every one in his own way. Like Samuel be ready with "Speak, Lord, thy servant heareth

Many a one has started life with hard duties to perform. One youngster sells newspapers to support a sick mother, another sweeps the store, and another keeps quiet around the house for a patient is sick. The sense of responsibility does not depend on age, but opportunity. He who does not fail at ten or twelve to do the unselfish, hard thing, will be sure to have built the surest foundation for an imperishable manhood.

What it Settles.

Canada Presbyterian.

The decision in the Galt case settles and number of points besides the doctrinal issues that were in dispute. The Assembly made a clear distinction between holding and propagation doctrines that are contrary to the standards. Had the appellants merely held their peculiar doctrines, their membership would not have been interfered with. Holding opinions, however, and promulgating them are entirely different things. A private member of the church must be allowed, and is allowed, quite enough of latitude in exercising the Protestant right of private judgment, but if he disturbs the peace of a congregation by propagating doctrines contrary to the standards, and, as the church believes, contrary to the Word of God, the church says kindly but firmly, Brother, we don't interfere with your personal liberty, but you must not interfere with our work. Every fair man will say that is a reasonable position for the church to take. A church that would do less than this would soon lose the respect of every sensible man in the country.

FLOOD AFTER FLOOD.

Portland Oregonian.

The floods of water in Pennsylvania have been followed by floods of foolish speech. The latter, however, have not been confined to Pennsylvania. The New York Witness, a journal professedly religious, very distinctly intimates the the Conemaugh disaster was of divine origin, in the nature of a punishment let loose upon the people for their sins. That pious journal admits that it was very sad, but says that "the fact is even sadder that the people of this noble country are so indifferent to the claims of that God who has showered so many blessing upon them as to need this awful warning." Were the Conemaugh people, then, worse than others, or were they punished for the sins of all? This recalls the old question—"Those eighteen upon whom the tower of Siloam fell, and slew them, think ye that they were sinners above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem?"

While intelligence and enlightenment often go with religious feeling, on the other hand ignorance, superstition and folly are very frequently its accompaniments. Thus, the enlightened religious mind takes a rational view of these disasters. It sees at once that the disasters ought to have been prevented by human foresight. But the superstitious mind refuses to see that the occurrences were preventable; and hence we have long homilies on the displeasure and wrath of God, who is punishing the people for their sins.

A paper at New Brighton, Pa., which has been giving ardent support to the prohibitionist amendment, finds that the destructive floods were poured down on those who were not in favor of prohibition; and this it considered a fact of "awful significance." "All the counties," it says, "which have suffered from the floods were against the amendment." Evidently it did not occur to the overzealous organ of prohibition that it was handling a dangerous back-action argument. For was it not water that produced all this destruction?

Rev James Madden of Kansas has been in Pennsylvania stumping for prohibition. He was in Johnstown when the flood came, but heard the warning in time to fly to a place of safety. "Don't," said, "those who did not heed the warning.—"I wish they were drowned, and went to hell." From this one might infer that only the bad people who were opposing the amendment were drowned; but in fact, as we have been told, many of the good people of the place were also lost. The calamity, as in all such cases, fell impartially on the just and the unjust, precisely as do the favors and blessings of heaven.

It will hardly do to trust to wooden dams, even if the people below them are all not prohibitionists or Christians of such stripe. The science of hydraulics, the same as other branches of science, is entirely free from partiality for creeds or opinions, and quite as free from prejudice or enmity against them. Hence we are not likely to find it adopted as a principle of engineering that it isn't necessary to have as strong a dam to protect Christians or prohibitionists as Turks infidels and beer-drinkers, against a rush of water.

The July issue of SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE is a Midsummer Fiction number, containing seven complete short stories, four of them richly illustrated by such artists as Frederic Remington, Robert Blum, and Chester Loomis; and an unusually exciting instalment of Mr Stevenson's serial, 'The Master of Ballantrae,' the illustration of which, from a drawing by William Hole, is the frontispiece of the number. There are also included the second article in the new Electrical Series, and interesting Poems, 'How the Derby was Won,' is a Kentucky story by Harrison Robertson, Managing Editor of the Louisville Courier Journal, who has written one of the most dramatic and picturesque descriptions of a great horse race that has appeared in the literature of the turf. 'The Rock of Beranger,' by T. R. Sullivan, is a story of comedy and sentiment, in an entirely different vein from this author's previous romantic fictions. The incidents of the tale are grouped about a walking tour made by two young men in the mountains of Switzerland. George A. Hibbard (the author of 'The End of the Beginning') contributes a very strong character-study entitled 'The Governor,' which is full of sentiment and deep feeling. There is a striking railway sketch by John R. Spears, entitled 'The Story of a Lost Car,' which is ingenious in construction In a quieter vein is Miss Margaret Crosby's 'Copeland Collection,' a story of Newport out of season, which Robert Blum has skillfully illustrated. There is also a bright comedietta, 'From Four to Six,' by Annie Eliot, and a short city sketch by H. H. Boyesen, called 'The Two Mollies.' The 'Electric Series' is continued by Charles L. Buckingham, with 'The Telegraph of To-day,' which is the leading article in the Magazine, containing very rich illustrations showing views of the great Western Union operating-room, the Commercial Cable offices, and many of the wonderful inventions of modern telegraphy. The poems of the issue are contributed by Graham R. Tomson, Charles Edwin Markham, D. C. Scott, R. H. Stoddard, E. S. Martin, H. P. Kimball. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, at $3 per annum, or 25 cents per number.

Results of Repeal.

Smith's Falls June 26.

Since the repeal of the Scott Act and the return to the license system a much better state of affairs is noticeable in our town. The whiskey dives have been effectually cleaned out, and with one or two exceptions all are now engaged in selling liquor have license to do so.

The success of high license wherever it has been tried has induced many Canadian journals to advocate the scheme. But it will never do. Think of the "sin" of licensing the "traffic." Better have free whiskey than that the nation should accept "blood-money" from the rumsellers. Drunkenness is a crying evil and a deadly sin; but it would be an awful thing to go in for a scheme that would reduce drunkenness at the minimum.

REPORTS OF GOVERNMENT CHEMISTS

As to Purity and Wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder.

"I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances. E. G. LOVE, Ph.D."

"It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure. The Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public. H. A. MOTT, Ph. D."

"The Royal Baking Powder is the purest in quality and highest in strength of any baking powder of which I have knowledge. WM. MCMURTRIE, Ph. D."

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, New York, and at State Fairs throughout the country.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic, and universal endorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists, and Boards of Health all over the world.

NOTE—The above DIAGRAM illustrates the comparative worth of various Baking Powders, as shown by Chemical Analysis and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth by Prof. Schedler only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, and, besides, affords the advantage of better work. A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair minded person of these facts.

While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a comparatively high degree of strength, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders, no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous

The July WIDE AWAKE has many strong, timely features, notably two especially American. One is Miss Seward's 'Fourth of July at Robert College'—the American college in Constantinople, a seed-bed of American ideas in Europe; the other is Mrs. Burton Harrison's 'The Republican Court,' in which she gives portraits and charming little biographies of eighteen of the prominent young society women who were in General Washington's circle of friends, Mrs. Washington herself leading the train. These portraits are from the celebrated Baltimore porcelains—an heirloom which ex-Mayor Hodges of that city has "founded" for his descendants; the eighteen plaques from the wall decoration of his dining-room. 'Mademoiselle Papa' is a touching little tale from the French, translated by Miss Virginia Champlin Vaughan, it will be remembered, met a fate quite as sudden and terrible as death from an explosion in the mines described in this story. There is a thrilling story of another French child in this number, 'The Child-Knight of Bouillers,' written by Madame Cramer Bernhard, a niece of General Grant. 'How Patty earned her Salt,' by Walter Colby, is quite a perfect little story. 'Cuck-coo!' by Mrs. Frances A. Humphrey, gives her own acquaintance of this haunting English bird. 'Five Little Peppers Further On,' the Margaret Sidney serial, relates some startling experiences of little Phronsie Pepper, at which everybody will be indignant. 'Sybil Fair's Fairness,' by Charles R. Talbot, is very interesting. Mrs. General Fremont writes graphically of her 'Sierra Neighbors in early California days. Mrs. Clara Doty Bates has a delightful contribution, the best thing in amusing verse for children which has appeared for some time, 'The Monkey and the Camel,' illustrated by Garrett. There are also many other bright things in verse and picture. Mrs. Sally Joy White's 'Public School Cooking,' Mrs. Goddard Orpen's diamond paper, Mr. Warren's 'Fishing with a Bottle,' Prof. Starr's 'Geological Talk,' and plenty of original anecdotes and entertaining 'short talks' in 'Men and Things.'

WIDE AWAKE is $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Publishers, Boston, Mass.

The Argentine Republic of South America has of late years become an extensive buyer and breeder of choice cattle, and the same enterprise is shown in Chili. A view of some fine cattle of pure Shorthorn breed owned on a Hacienda near Santiago is given in the American Agriculturist for July, the illustrations showing also the Chilian cattle-sheds in which they are kept.

There is a demand, both in city and country, for good plans for sheds for horses, inexpensive and at the same time combining comfort convenience and a reasonable degree of taste with economy. One which offers a considerable amount of roominess at a low cost is a cottage plan illustrated in the American Agriculturist for July. With a pleasant surrounding of trees and shrubbery, it would be quite pretty. Its estimated cost, complete, is but $1,000.

The pretty Exmoor ponies, sleek, docile and intelligent, form the subject of a spirited engraving in the American Agriculturist for July. The breeding of children's ponies—so great has become the demand for them—could no doubt be carried on more extensively than it is, and with profit. The prime points for a child's pony are that it should be pretty to look at, kind of temper and an easy traveller. Spirit and fleetness come afterwards. The Shetland and the Exmoor ponies are the gentlest and the prettiest, and they are as knowing and intelligent as full-grown horses. The different kinds of ponies bred and sold especially for children's use are described in the interesting article that accompanies the engraving.

Bronchitis Cured

After spending ten Winters South, was cured by Scott's Emulsion.

146 Centre St., New York, June 25th, 1888.

The Winter after the great fire in Chicago I contracted Bronchial affections and since then have been obliged to spend nearly every Winter south. Last November was advised to try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites and to my surprise was relieved at once, and by continuing its use three months was entirely cured, gained flesh and strength and was able to stand even the Blizzard and attend to business every day.

The Comte de Paris, head of the Bourbon family, who recently celebrated his silver wedding, is a worker. He rises at 5:30 o'clock in summer and at 6 o'clock in the winter, and, lighting his lamp, if necessary, begins the labor of the day. He has a little breakfast with his family at 8 o'clock, then he returns to his work. His correspondence is extensive and he makes a point of replying to all his letters.

"There is $2,000,500,000 invested in the dairying business in the United States," says a Philadelphian, with a proclivity for statistics. "That amount is almost double the money invested in banking and commercial industries. It is estimated that it requires 15,000,000 cows to supply the demand for milk and its products in the States of the Union. To feed these cows 60,000,000 acres of land are under cultivation. The agricultural and dairy machinery and implements in use are worth over $200,000,000. The men employed in the business number 750,000, and the horses over 1,000,000.
