A DARING EXPLOIT

A Skilful Manoeuvre by Sir Archibald Hunter

The fact that Sir Archibald Hunter is with one exception the youngest officer of his rank in the Army, is sufficient proof of his soldierly qualities and his fighting skill, and he has well deserved the Governorship of Gibraltar which has been conferred upon him. He joined the King's Own Royal Lancaster Regiment thirty-six years ago, at eighteen. At twenty-nine he was a brevet-major, and at forty a full-fledged major-general. "Hunter's rag" it was that waved in the forefront of every battle during the last arduous campaign on the Nile, while the man whom it represented was known as "the point of the Sirdar's spear." One of Sir Archibald's most daring exploits was performed one dark night while at Ladysmith, when the General, with a little band of volunteers, crept over one of the surrounding hills and blew the head off a mischievous Long Tom. He led all the way on the dangerous task, surprised and overcame the Boers, and crippled the gun. Sir Archibald is one of the few British military officers to enjoy the personal friendship of the German Emperor, whom he once saved from a serious accident. During a visit of the Kaiser to Lord Rosebery at Dalmeny a few years ago, Queen Victoria was in command of the troops in Scotland, and was present in that capacity on the station platform to welcome the Emperor. Lord Rosebery's carriage was waiting, and the Emperor had just taken his seat in it when one of the horses commenced to plunge violently, and in another moment the pair would have bolted. Like a flash, however, General Hunter reached the animal and dealt it a smashing blow on the nose that quickly quieted it. Another pair of horses were soon found and Sir Archibald received the thanks of the Kaiser for the smart way he grappled with the situation. At the time he has been very popular with the Emperor, who never forgets a service, and he shares with Lord Roberts the distinction of being the only non-German soldier who has a standing invitation to visit the Royal Palace at Potsdam.

Lippincott's and the New Year.

Lippincott's Magazine wastes no time in beginning to take its promises of good things to come during 1911. The January issue opens with a thoroughly delightful complete novelette entitled "Lista," by Zona Gale, among the "The Loves of Pelleas and Etarre," "Friendship Village Love Stories," and other worthful books. There are a number of unusual short stories in the number, including a newspaper yarn called "The Pledge That Stuck," by George L. Knapp, whose recent novel, "The Scales of Justice," has made something of a hit. "The Bravery of Jules Lavalle," by Nevil G. Henshaw, author of "Alirs of the Grand Wood," is a Louisiana story of queer but interesting people. "The Bonfire," by Charles Harvey Raymond, is a striking story of the Philippines in time of peace. Charlton Lawrence Edholm's offering is a humorous story called "The Missionary Hero." "Mr. Williams of the Parks," by Thomas Chesworth, is a cleverly told tale with an unexpected denouement. "Billy's Incantation" is a Southern sketch of rare charm.

6 YEAR OLD GIRL

Cured of Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Alex. Moore, of James St., Oxford, N.S., says: "Booth's Kidney Pills cured our little daughter, Christian, age six years, of many symptoms of kidney weakness. She complained of a sore back, the kidney secretions were frequent and uncontrollable, especially at night. Her stomach was weak and her appetite poor. This caused her to have frequent headaches, and the least exertion would tire her. We had tried many remedies, but she did not improve. Finally we learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and procured a box. In a short time she was well and does not now complain about her back, the kidney secretions have become normal, and she plays around the house with no apparent fatigue. We always recommend Booth's Kidney Pills."

Booth's Kidney Pills

Booth's Kidney Pills carry a guarantee that you derive no benefit your money will be refunded. Booth's Kidney Pills are a specific for all diseases of the kidneys and bladder. Sold by all dealers, or a box, or postpaid from The R. L. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. Sold and guaranteed by Higginbotham Drug Co.

An opportunity is afforded to Canadian business men, manufacturers, fruit importers, capitalists, etc., to personally investigate business conditions and opportunities for investment in the West Indies and British South America. H. McKail Cornish, managing editor of Canada and West Indies Magazine, has arranged with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to secure the S.S. Lake Manitoba, a roomy, comfortable ship, provided a hundred and twenty-five persons signify their intention to take the cruise. It is proposed the steamship will leave St. John, N.B., January 11th, for a six weeks' cruise, leaving on or about February 24, which will permit a visit to Cuba and Havana, the various ports in Jamaica, Trinidad, Georgetown, Demerara, St. Kitts, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, Antigua, Grenada, Barbadoes, Martinique, Porto Rico, San Domingo and Bermuda, returning to St. John. This ship will be especially equipped with electric fans, orchestra for dancing, etc., a fine motor launch for special shore trips, a dark room for the convenience of photographers, deck awnings, hammocks for those who desire to sleep on deck, etc. The well-known high-class service of the Canadian Pacific Empress steamships will be provided. It is the desire to give Canadians an opportunity for the expansion of commerce between these various countries, and nothing will be left undone to assure the maximum of comfort for the minimum of expense. The number will be limited to 150 passengers, and the fare for the round trip will be from $200 to $300, according to accommodations. This trip has received the endorsement of the Depart of Trade and Commerce of Canada.

Don't Be Bald

Nearly Anyone May Secure a Splendid Growth of Hair.

We have a remedy that has a record of growing hair and curing baldness in 93 out of every 100 cases where used according to directions for a reasonable length of time. That may seem like a strong statement—it is, and we mean it to be, and no one should doubt it until they have put our claims to an actual test.

We are so certain Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will cure dandruff, prevent baldness, stimulate the scalp and hair roots, stop falling hair and grow new hair, that we personally give our positive guarantee to refund every penny paid us for it in every instance where it does not give entire satisfaction to the user.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is as pleasant to use as clear spring water. It is delightfully perfumed, and does not grease or gum the hair. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. With our guarantee back of it, you certainly take no risk. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store, Higginbotham Drug Co.

MILLIONAIRES' DISPLAY

Ten Thousand Pounds Spent Ove Grouse Shooting

Mr. Harry Payne Whitney, the millionaire, who derives his wealth from banking and railway enterprise, is illustrating the pitch of costliness to which sport in England may attain. Mr. Whitney has laid out about $50,000 upon the grouse shooting over the Holwick Moors.

Mr. Whitney left New York on August 13th by the White Star liner Celtic, and disembarked at Holyhead. With him travelled Mrs. Whitney, their two children, and a number of sportsmen he has brought over for the grouse shooting, a party.

Mr. H. Burden, Mr. Payne Thompson, and several other well-known "New Yorkers" travelled in luxurious style and occupied the private suites specially fitted, and for which a charge of $700 each is reported to have been made. The sitting rooms in the suites were decorated daily with choice flowers, for which Mrs. Whitney paid $200 before leaving New York.

During the early part of the voyage the millionaires' party kept to their own rooms, but later on dined in the saloon and entered upon an exchange of socialities with other passengers.

Mrs. Whitney, who is a daughter of Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and is said to be worth a couple of millions in her own right, appeared in a number of magnificent costumes during the voyage, and on one occasion wore a diamond necklace worth $50,000. Mr. Harry Payne Whitney, like his father, the late Mr. Charles Whitney, one time Secretary to the American Navy during the Administration of President Cleveland, is a keen sportsman, and keeps the best racing stable in the States.

A CONSUMPTIVE'S DESPAIR

A Wife's Terrible Struggle to Save Husband's Life

Short but tragic was the story told by a feeble, nervous elderly woman to a London, England, reporter. Describing how she struggled with her husband to prevent him taking his life. Deceased was Henry Archibald Death 49, a gasfitter, and his widow said that he had only been kept alive during the past twelve months through having two silver tubes inserted in his throat. He was a consumptive. He also had epileptic fits, and one of these occurred when she was alone with him. Suddenly he attempted to pull the tubes from his throat, but she caught his hands and they struggled together for some time until she was finally overpowered. Deceased then pulled out the tubes, and, being unable to breathe, very soon died. Dr. Fredrick Ellis corroborated the woman's statement as to the cause of her husband's death, and the jury found that deceased committed suicide while in a fit.

McClure's Magazine.

There are two notable articles in the January number of McClure's magazine. Burton J. Hendrick tells of "The Mormon Revival of Polygamy." While Utah was a territory the authorities were able to deal with it and sent many polygamists to penitentiary. President Woodruff then had a pretended revelation from God that all Mormons polygamously married should give up their plural wives and that no more plural marriages should take place. This deceived the United States government and Utah was made a state. Now, under President Joseph F. Smith, polygamy has been resumed and under statehood can be practiced with impunity. There is an explanation of the Mormons' abominable theological doctrine. In "The Masters of Capital in America," John Moody and George Kibbe Turner talk of the inevitable railroad monopoly. There is an instalment of Mrs. Humphrey Ward's novel, "The Case of Richard Meynall," with complete stories and poems.

WARY AND WATCHFUL

"Found, on 13th inst., in High Street, a gentleman's gold watch. Owner can have same by paying expenses of advertising on application to Alex McGillies, 17, Catchem Close." So ran the advertisement. Presently Mr. Thomson was ushered in.

"Vell," said Alexander, "vat can I do for you?"

"I—I have called," said Mr. Thomson, "with respect to my watch."

"Ah! you haf, eh? Veil, here was der watch, and dere vas two pounds to pay for advertisements."

With a face three times its usual length, Mr. Thomson paid the money and bore off the watch. When he had gone, Alexander took another gold (?) watch from his drawer, and awaited the next Mr. Thomson.

"Ah!" he mused. "Dis vatch-finding vas good pizness."

DASH FOR LIBERTY

E. B. James Recalls an Experience in South Africa

During the late South African War, after the engagement of Nicholson's Nek, on October 30th, 1899, says E. B. James, England, I was taken prisoner by the Boers, along with 995 others, after seven hours' fighting. We were being sent under escort to a place called Waschbach, where we were to entrain for Pretoria.

I had been wounded in the foot, and, after proceeding about twelve miles, my wound became very painful, and I asked the Boer commander to allow me to ride one of the reserve ponies, of which there were several. I was allowed this privilege, and when we reached Elandslaagte I asked the commander if I might bathe my wounded foot in a stream, permission being grudgingly granted me.

I was, roughly, some twenty-five miles from Ladysmith, and every mile was swarming with Boers; but I decided to make a bolt for it. As soon as my guards saw I had finished, they gave the order to mount. Then came my chance. The Boers did exactly as I expected. Instead of waiting to see me mount, they mounted with me. Quick as thought, I pricked up my pony with the penknife I had used for cutting the bandage, and, turning his head towards Ladysmith, galloped away into the gathering dusk, accompanied by the ping-ping of the bullets which followed me.

I was not hit; and the Boers—who, in chasing me, were riding farther from their commando—soon gave it up. On the following morning I staggered into Ladysmith, exhausted, but free.

A WORD FROM MR. KELSO

He Urges Guardians to Look Well After the Children

Have you taken a child from one of the orphan homes in Toronto? If not, why have you done so? Is it because the idea that you will get your work as much as possible out of the child, and give him as little as possible in return, never realized your ideal of a good and adding a little kindness to a world often too cheerless? In short, have you been selfish? Or, have you been in the step that is going to be rewarded? Or, have you been a hot-tempered, high minded, human? Too often, it is to be feared, people look on these poor little ones as mere chattels. It is hard to ask the ladies the question, "If this child were mine, how would I want it to be treated?"

Most of us, perhaps, the lack of a sense of responsibility allows it. It is failing to read the child to school. This fact is by no means unknown to Mr. Kelso, Superintendent of the Children's Aid Society, and he has asked us to lay the matter before you, hoping you will, at least, when read our paper, to see that you are not already in this respect.

It is a sad picture that we provide for his report, realizing, as must all reflective, who gives unprejudiced thought to the matter, the truth of his words. "If a child is deprived of educational advantages, between the ages of eight and twelve, the loss can never be replaced." We can, here, do only a little with you. It is rather the only time with you. It is rather that not only the young people themselves, but the country, at large, that they should have the necessary training for their life's work. You cannot evade responsibility with hopeful "Think of it."

THE CHANCE OF THE SEASON.

Two Acquaintances Worth Cultivating.

From now until May 1st, 1911, The Daily Mail and Empire and our own paper for 12 months. The two together for the respective periods stated will be sent to new subscribers for the Champion, any individual address, by mail only, in Canada (Toronto and suburbs excepted) for $1.25.

Now this is the chance of the season, and during a particularly newsy period of this year and next, in which The Mail and Empire will be especially interesting, while our own paper will contain a maximum local record all the time, with the combination subscription, as the above price indicates, at the least nominal rate.

The Sessions of the Dominion and Provincial Parliaments, the Municipal Elections of Town and Country, many of the most important public functions and conventions, will be covered and recorded.

We want more people in this progressive district to become regular subscribers to our paper, as by doing so they indirectly co-operate with us in advancing the welfare of the community, and if a mutual acquaintance like The Mail and Empire will serve to introduce us to new patrons, we feel that the consequent association, as a reader of both papers from now to next May, will lead to a permanent and valued friendship for us all.

MADE WELL AND STRONG

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Dovedale, Sask.—"I was a sufferer from female weakness—monthly periods irregular and painful and a bad discharge, backache and wretched headache, and had felt weak ever since the birth of my twins. I tried doctors but got no relief. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after three weeks I was feeling much better, and now I am well again."—Mrs. Bessie Bily, Dovedale, Sask., Canada.

Another Woman Cured.

Christiana, Tenn.—"I suffered from the worst form of female trouble so that at times I thought I could not live, and my nerves were in a dreadful condition. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me and made me feel like a different woman. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold to suffering women."—Mrs. Mary Wood, R.F.D.3.

If you belong to that countless army of women who suffer from some form of female ills, don't hesitate to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

For thirty years this famous remedy has been the standard for all forms of female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, fibroid tumors, ulceration, irregularities, backache, and nervous prostration.

WANTED, AN OFFICE-BOY

"I can't keep the visitors from coming up," said an office-boy dejectedly to the editor of a popular newspaper. "When I say you're out they don't believe me. They say they must see you."

"Well," said the editor, "just tell them that is what they all say. I must have quiet."

Shortly afterwards there called a lady who insisted on seeing the editor. The boy informed her that it was impossible.

"Oh! I know it, dear. I'm his wife!"

"That's what they all say!" replied the lad.

There is a vacancy for another office boy.

UNDYING CHARM

Norah had been as parlor maid in an artistic family for six months. It seemed to Miss Aurelia only natural that Norah should have developed some love of art in that time. One day she discovered the little maid, duster in hand, gazing at Venus of Milo.

"Do you like her best of all, Norah?" asked Miss Aurelia.

"Sure, and I do, miss," said Norah warmly. "She may not look quite so nate wid her arms gone, but she's so aisy to dust! I fair love her!"

WHAT A C.P.R. FIREMAN OWES TO ZAM-BUK.

George H. Duffus of Robertson St., Fort William, a C. P. R. fireman, says: "The water gauge of my locomotive burst and scalded the whole left side of my face terribly. I had a box of Zam-Buk in my pocket, which I was using for a sore on my lip, and when I had recovered from the first shock of the accident, I produced the balm and had it applied freely to the scalded parts. I was suffering acute agony, but within a wonderfully short time Zam-Buk gave me ease. I was able to continue my journey and upon reaching home, I obtained more Zam-Buk and continued the treatment. Zam-Buk acted wonderfully well, and in a few days had the wound nicely healing. I don't know anything so fine as Zam-Buk as a healer of burns, scalds, cuts, and similar injuries, which workers are so liable to, and, in my opinion, a box of Zam-Buk should be kept handy in every worker's home."

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, blood-poison, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns, bruises, and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price.

THE DIFFICULTIES OF OUR AIRMEN

Some of the Troubles They Have to Overcome—Why the Flying Machines Fly

The question that most naturally occurs to you in considering the aeroplane is—"Why, seeing that it is heavier than air, does it not fall? Why does it stay aloft? It is considerably heavier than air, and on the same principle that iron will not swim you would naturally expect that it would refuse to soar. It is the air pressure beneath the plane that keeps it up. A balloon can remain stationary over a given spot in a calm, but an aeroplane must constantly move if it is to remain in the air. The monoplanes and biplanes on which our foremost aviators have been making and breaking so many records of late are somewhat in the same position as a skater on thin ice. The skater must move fast enough to reach a new section of ice before he fails; the aeroplane must move fast enough to reach a new section of air before it fails. Hence the aeroplane is constantly struggling with gravitation.

The simplest and most familiar example of an aeroplane is the kite of our boyhood days. We all remember how we kept it aloft by holding it against the wind or by running with it if there happened to be only a gentle breeze. When the wind died down or the string broke the kite fell. Above all things, it was necessary to hold the kite's surface toward the wind—an end which we sometimes accomplished with a string. The eagle is an animated kite without the string, but it keeps its outstretched wings to the wind by muscular power. If we can find a substitute for the string, some device, in other words, which will enable us to hold the kite in the proper direction, we have invented a flying machine. The pull or the thrust of an engine-driven propellor is the screened substitute for the string of a kite or the muscles of an eagle. The propeller creates an artificial wind, as it were, to keep the aeroplane up.

Maintaining Balance

Of course, as you will readily understand, there are many other things to be considered besides mere propelling machinery. Of these the first in importance is certainly the very difficult art of balancing the plane so that it will glide on an even keel. As a hawk sways from side to side as he soars like an acrobat on a tight rope. Occasionally, as you may have noticed, a bird will catch the wind on the top of his wing, with the result that he will capsize and fall some distance before he can recover himself. If the living aeroplanes of nature find the feat of balancing so difficult, is it any wonder that men have been killed in endeavoring to discover their secret?

The whole art of maintaining the side-to-side balance of an aeroplane consists in keeping the centre of gravity and the centre of air pressure on the same vertical line. If the two should not at least approximately coincide the aeroplane is capsized.

There are obviously two ways of maintaining side-to-side balance—one by constantly shifting the centre of gravity, the other by constantly shifting the centre of air-pressure. The first method involves ceaseless flash-like movement on the part of the aviator; for by shifting his body he shifts the centre of gravity.

The aeroplane must be balanced not only from side to side, but fore and aft as well. The same necessity exists in the old-fashioned single-surface kite. To give it the necessary fore-and-aft stability we used to adorn it with a long tail of knotted strips of paper or rags. If the tail was not heavy enough the kite dived erratically, and sometimes met its destruction by colliding with a tree. To ensure longitudinal stability many aeroplane flying machines are similarly provided with a tail, which consists generally of one or more plane surfaces. Some aeroplanes are, however, tailless, but usually they are less stable than the tailed variety.

Commencing a Flight

In order to fly an aeroplane, like a kite or a soaring bird, must rise in the very teeth of the wind. What is more, it must be in motion before it can fly. How this preliminary motion was to be obtained was a problem that long baffled the flying machine inventor. Eagles, vultures, and other soaring birds launch themselves either by leaping from the limb of a tree, or the edge of a cliff, or by running along the ground with wings outspread until they have acquired sufficient speed.

From this we can readily understand why a vulture can be confined in a small cage which is entirely open at the top.

To get up preliminary speed many methods have been adopted. One of the earliest was by running the machine down an inclined track. Many aviators, however, mount their aeroplanes on bicycle wheels, and, like the eagle, run along the ground for a short distance. Just as a scaring bird uses his legs in leaping in the air or running on the ground to start his flight, and also in alighting, so most aeroplanes alight with the bicycle wheels that serve them during the brief moments of launching. Sometimes, however, special alighting devices are provided.

The problem of steering an aeroplane when it is launched is solved by two sets of rudders. A steamboat is a vehicle that travels in two directions only, hence it requires only a single vertical rudder, which serves to guide it from side to side. An aeroplane moves not only from side to side, but up and down as well. Hence, it is equipped with a vertical rudder similar to that of a steamboat, and also with a horizontal rudder, which serves to alter its course up or down, and which is becoming more widely known as an elevator. Fore-and-aft stability is attained in tailless machines by manipulation of this elevator. Even in tailed machines its use for that purpose is almost imperative.

DID FOR FATHER!

An old man and his daughter, a girl of eighteen, had a little booth on a country road, where you threw a ring at a clay pipe, and got a cigar for every "bust."

Chancing to pass that way, an expert cricketer thought he'd try his luck. Soon he had won thirty cigars.

"Seems rather mean," he pondered, as he was about to depart.

And then, in a burst of generosity, he handed them, with a courtly bow, to the young girl.

"Thanks!" she said smiling prettily. "They'll do for father."

Two days later the cricketer happened to pass the same spot. But now the girl was running the booth alone.

She saw the question in his eyes, and answered it.

"Yes," she said; "they've done for father!"
