Pea-Fed vs. Corn-Fed Hogs

The Montreal Trade Bulletin: It is to be regretted that an attempt is being made to induce Ontario farmers to feed their hogs on corn instead of peas and other suitable coarse grains, by the false statement that as high prices were being paid for corn fed as pea-fed hogs, when the facts of the case are that Canadian packers are paying $1.60 to $2 per 100 lbs. more for pea-fed hogs in Chicago. This proves conclusively what the Trade Bulletin has repeatedly stated, namely: that Canadian bacon brings 10s to 12c per cwt. more that the American corn-fed bacon. Nothing can be clearer or more convincing than this, and if the friends of American packers can only pursuade Canadian farmers to feed their hogs on cheap American corn, they know perfectly well that the rapidly increasing export trade in Canadian bacon would at once be checked, the prestige which it has won in the English market would be lost, and we should then have to come down to the level of values paid for American bacon on the other side, which would compel our packers to pay about 2c per lb. less for their live hogs. This is a very series question for our farmers to consider. We have already built up an export trade with England which promises to develop into the millions and tens of millions annually, as our bacon has become noted on the other side for its high quality, and the well known brands of Canadian pea-fed bacon and hams are being enquired for and even preferred to Irish and Danish brands; and are we going to risk the loss of this important new trade, by fattening our hogs upon cheap American corn, which produces oily and flabby kind of pork in contradistinction to the nice solid pea-fed Canadian meat? It is to be hoped not.

The Marvellous Clondyke

Evidence accumulates that Canada will become best known to the world as a mineral field, not that the greatest amount of her wealth will come from that source, but because of the glamor that the yellow metal possesses for all sorts and conditions of men. The discoveries in southern British Columbia and in Western Ontario caused considerable excitement, but it is likely to be vastly exceeded by the sensation to be caused among fortune-hunters by the stories that reach us from the Yukon country. Miners have been at work there for some years, but it was not till the discoveries were made at Clondyke that men felt that here at length the fabled Pactolus was revealed to their eyes. One returned miner describes the sands as saturated with scales and nuggets of the untarnished metal.

There is something attractive about placer diggings. It needs no expensive machinery to get at the much-besought metal. A shovel and a tin pan supplies what in quartz mining demands steam-driven machinery and giant powder, making great holes and tunnels in the everlasting rock, and finally fervent heat to reduce it to a fluid state. This gold-consuming process is not needed in the placer mines. The miner carries all his machinery on his shoulder. By these simple means it is stated that some lucky chaps have in two or three months sifted out over a hundred thousand dollars from the golden sand. It sounds Munchausen-like and there is possibly some exaggeration, but that extraordinary deposits of the yellow metal have been discovered cannot be doubted.

What has given substantiality to the tales that have been coming from the Clondyke is the arrival of the steamer Portland at Seattle from St. Michael's Bay, Alaska. She had on board 68 miners returning from the diggings, each carrying from $7000 to $100,000 in gold dust obtained during the past winter. There is, of course, another side to the picture. The diggings are on the arctic circle, and the cold in winter is of course intense. The difficulty of reaching the fields is enormous. Provisions are scarce and correspondingly dear. A barrel of flour is sometimes worth $45. Only men inured to hardships could endure the privations which are incident to life in the frozen north. It has been said, however, that if it were certain that gold could be found at the north pole the long-sought-for axle of the earth would long ago have been laid out in mining claims, and the statement is not altogether extravagant. The Clondyke, we may be sure, will become a well-known name the world over.—Globe.

Miss Jean Ingelow, the author, is dead.

Mr. Peter McDiarmid of Pickering was cutting hay with a mower when his team ran away and he was killed.

Mr. Thos. Plant, of the Batteau, has on exhibition at his place the body of a big snake he killed Thursday last. The snake when just killed measured three and a half feet in length. and six inches in circumference. Its back is of an earthy color, and its belly white. It is covered with scales, and has a very large and wide mouth. The snake was advancing on Mr. Plant's baby when he saw it and killed it, and it showed fight until it was put out.—Collingwood Enterprise.

A short time ago a man called at Mr. Copeland Trelfords and asked permission to leave a piano there, stating that the firm intended sending a music teacher to the neighborhood to give lesssons free, and they wanted a safe place for the piano He also promised that if the firm succeeded in selling four pianos in that vicinity, Mr. T. should be given one for his kindness in the matter. In order however to get the instrument insured, it would be necessary for Mr. Trelford to sign a document. Unfortunately he consented. In a few days a second man appeared with the piano which he claimed Mr. T. had ordered, telling him the "order" was binding. Seeing no way out of the difficulty, Mr. Trelford signed two notes, one for $60, the other for $360, both due in four months. He realized he has been duped, and it is likely action will be taken to stop payment of the notes. A shotgun or a bull dog would be a good thing to have near by as a defence from such scoundrels.
