The auditor of the Hydro Electric Commission was in town on Monday and went over the local Hydro books and found the system in a gratifying state, notwithstanding increased expenditures of war time. There was a gross surplus on the year's business of $839.51, which after deducting $325 as estimated shrinkage in value of plant leaves $514.51 as net surplus for the year. The revenue was as follows :

Domestic light.....	$ 942 02
Commercial light.....	822 35
Commercial power.....	1772 75
Street light.....	744 00
Total.....	$ 4281 12

A PROGIDY

A gentleman living just outside of Toronto went into the city to his office each day. When he was leaving home on the morning before Christmas, his wife said she would like him to bring a banner for her Sunday School class to use at an entertainment that evening, but what she did not know yet was the wording and the size needed. They agreed that she should send him a telegram during the day, giving him these two items. Consequently, before starting for home in the afternoon he went to the nearby telegraph office and found quite an excitement over the message which had just been received and which read : "Unto us a child is born. Three feet wide and six feet long."

Spent Two Millions

Among the organizations operating among the troops, both at home and abroad, to improve their social condition and ameliorate the hardships of war, the Salvation Army was the first in the field, and it is the last to make an appeal for public donations.

This organization, which operates in 63 countries and speaks 40 languages, is launching a campaign to raise throughout the Dominion one million dollars to carry on the work among the troops and to get them back to civil employment. It has adopted the slogan "First to Aid—Last to Appeal," referring to the fact that the Salvation Army had its officers and soldiers in Belgium on the heels of Lord French's army, that is, on the 18th day of August, 1914, just fourteen days after the declaration of war, and has stayed with the game till the last without asking the public to make a special donation for the expenses of the campaign

The Canadian public, which is to be asked to give a million dollars for the Salvation Army's war and reconstruction work, is entitled to know what claim the Salvation Army has for monetary assistance. In the first place the Army has spent $2,000,000 in war activities. Here is a summary of the operations of the Army directly connected with the war:—

Forty rest rooms, equipped with papers magazines, writing materials, etc. These are for the use of soldiers.

Forty-five motor ambulances in France manned by Salvationists.

Ninety-six hostels for use of soldiers and sailors. These are located in France England and Canada. The Army plans a wide extension of its string of hostels in Canada.

One hundred and ninety-seven huts at soldiers' camps. These are used for religious and social gatherings, and at these huts the fighting men are able to buy what extras they require in the nature of "eats" at the very lowest rates.

Two hundred and ninety eight war orphans cared for.

Seven hundred and sixty one Salvation Army Officers and members devote their whole time to work at the front.

Twenty one hundred war widows in the care of the Army.

Five thousand, three hundred and seventeen beds in hostels close to railway stations and port landings for soldiers and sailors going to and returning from the front.

Fifty thousand Salvation Army Officers and members fighting with Allied armies.

One hundred thousand parcels of food and clothing distributed among soldiers and sailors.

One hundred thousand wounded soldiers taken from battlefields in Salvation Army ambulances.

Three hundred thousand soldiers and sailors daily attend Salvation Army huts.

These are but a few of the things that are seen and recorded. There are many other activities which count for the Salvation Army, but which cannot be put down in statistical form. For instance, many soldiers can tell us of some favor, some blessing, some advice they have received at the hands of the soldiers enlisted under the Blood-and-Fire Banner of the Army. It is a wonderful story of sacrifice and heroism. The boys have told us about it in their letters home. The deeds of the Salvation Army are well known and appreciated.

In getting the boys back to civil life the Salvation Army has much work to do. It will help many a discouraged man onward and upward in the struggle for existence, but to do the work that will be open to do, a vast amount of money will be required. One million dollars will not be too much.
