EDITORIAL VIEWS

The Durham Review heads an article, "Unhappy Ireland" The Review is wrong Ireland was never happier since St, Patrick chased the snakes than she is at the present moment. If the Ulstermen were all deported, or the Catholics chased into the sea, then would Ireland indeed have reason to be called "unhappy." The joy of quarreling would then be eliminated, for it is "scrap" that constitutes the Irishman's joy in existence.

Again we would draw attention to the fact that no arrangemant's have been made for an official welcoming of the returned soldiers, who are now arriving. Our village council should surely do something along that line to give the boys a fitting welcome and prove to them that our interest did not cease with the "send off" and reading of farewell addresses. The welcome should be of a more enthusiastic nature than the farewell.

Owen Sound wants a Memorial Hall erected to cost $100,000, and to be erected in Owen Sound of course, at the expense of the county as a whole, but benevolently agrees to pay half the cost and attend to the caretaking! They will approach the County Council with that end in view. We do not believe that the people of the county will be satisfied with any such arrangement. They would at least want to know what such a "hall" would be used for, and if it would be of any future cost to the county, It would of course be an ornament to the county town—couldn't help but be for that money—but we doubt if the people are in a mood just now to make big expenditures for purely ornamental work. Reconstruction and paying off our war indebtedness have the floor just now with all thinking people. Of course our heroes are entitled to the best we can give them in the way of immortalizing their great sacrifice, but selfishness should not enter into any matter of this nature, and care should be taken not to indulge a semblance of consulting our own material welfare by magnifying our own importance with mere outward show.

Canada's Financial Situation

R H. Coats, Dominion Statistician, in a recent article in the Monetary Times on "The National Wealth and Income of Canada" says: "Back of the entire reconstruction and rehabilitation problem stands the financial problem; how can we produce and save sufficient wealth to liquidate the obligations of the war.

The Greater Production campaigns of the last two years have demonstrated that, in the matter of production, Canadians will be equal to any demand that is likely to be made on them. But, saving is quite another thing. Canadians should cultivate it more; for what will greater production avail, unless, at the same time, there be greater saving?

Canadian enterprise will solve the problem of Greater Production. The Canadian War Savings Plan will solve the problem of Greater Saving. Through the purchase of War Savings and Thrift Stamps saving is made easy. These stamps will greatly help solve Canada's financial problem.

HENS ARE NOW LAYING

By Lighting Pens Till 9 p.m. Egg Production Nearly Doubled.

Cause, Symptoms and Cure of Ringworm Explained—As It Is Very Contagious the Stockman Must Take Great Precautions to Prevent Its Spread.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

MOSTLY everybody who is keeping poultry wants to get eggs in winter. Generally speaking, the number of eggs gradually goes down from week to week from September to January and then there is a slow but gradual increase until March, April and May, which in Ontario are the best months for egg production.

It is unusual, and in most cases very unwise, to publish figures in regard to experiments until the material has been very thoroughly tested, but in this particular case, considering the high cost of feeds and the general scarcity of new laid eggs, we are giving the figures on a rather short test of but four weeks' duration. The results appear to be generally true in all pens tested and are in accord with results obtained elsewhere.

The increase in egg yield has been obtained by the use of electric lights, or prolonging the day. The facts of the matter appear to be that a hen's crop is too small a reservoir to hold sufficient feed for the long night. A hen, to lay, must have a surplus of feed over and above that required for body maintenance.

In these particular trials, the results of which are given below, the lights were turned on at dusk and were turned off at nine o'clock at night. The birds get their first feed in the morning at seven o'clock and a few dull mornings require lights for about one hour.

The usual feed of grain given at about four to five o'clock in the afternoon is missed or only a handful or two of grain is given to twenty-five birds, simply to keep them moving a little. The full feed is given at about eight o'clock.

The following results have been secured:—

No. of birds.	Eggs laid week beginning October 6th.	13th.	20th.	27th.	Ttl.
50 April hatched pullets (electric lights used) ...	53	150	211	250	664
50 April hatched pullets (nclights used	14	74	130	174	392
25 yearling hens (electric lights used)	76	96	89	108	369
25 yearling hens (no lights used)	62	70	60	61	253
100 March hatched pullets, all in one pen (lights used)	416	401	404	444	1,665

There are many people keeping poultry who have no electric lights. Fair to good results have been secured elsewhere by using ordinary barn lanterns. The danger of fire when using lanterns is materially increased. We have not tested these as yet but hope to have them under way soon. For electric lighting we use three ordinary bulbs for a pen of one hundred birds, or one light in a twenty-five bird pen.—Prof. R. W. Graham, O. A. College, Guelph.

Ringworm.

Ringworm is a contagious disease to which all classes of animals, and man, are subject.

Calves and young cattle appear to be more susceptible to the trouble than other animals, but no age renders an animal immune. It is purely a skin disease, and is due to the presence of a vegetable parasite, which is readily capable of being conveyed from one animal to another by direct contact, the hands of the attendant, pails, stable utensils, clothing, harness, saddles, blankets, the contact of one animal with the stalls, etc., of affected animals, etc. In like manner, curry-combs, brushes, rubbing cloths, etc., that are used on affected animals of any class, if used on other animals, become a fertile cause of infection.

Symptoms.—While any part of the animal may be the seat of the disease, the skin around the eyes and of the face, and on the neck and back, appears to be the favorite seat.

The first symptom shown is usually an itchiness, which is followed by a slight form of eruption, which soon assumes the appearance of little yellowish scales of a circular form, the mass scales forming a circular space, hence the term "ringworm." A variable number of these circular patches may be noticed on different parts of the body.

Treatment.—It is necessary that great care be taken to avoid the conveyance of the virus from the diseased to healthy animals. Where practicable, it is well to remove all non-infected animals to non-infected premises. The infected premises should be disinfected by thoroughly sweeping and dusting, and then giving a thorough coat of an insecticide, as a hot 10 per cent of one of the coal tar antiseptics or carbolic acid, or a coat of hot lime wash with 5 per cent. carbolic acid.

Local treatment consists in moistening the scales with warm water and soap, or sweet oil, removing them in order to expose the unprotected surfaces of the affected areas. An insecticide, as tincture of iodine should be applied once or twice daily until cured. — J. H. R., Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.
