Will the Parachute Open?

The observation balloon is on fire. The man must jump. What must be his feeling as he fastens the rope of the parachute and takes "that desperate spring into the vast grey, vapoury nothingness"? Will the parachute open? At the critical moment will it stand the test?

That is the question which purchasers have the right to ask about everything they buy. Clothes---will they stand the wear? Food---will it provide the nourishment? A daily newspaper---will it give the news quickly, fairly, in easily-comprehended form? Has it the organization enabling it to do so?

To that question---asked of The Toronto Daily Star---we answer:

315 Men and Women Work to Make The Toronto Daily Star the "Greatest" Newspaper in Canada

Three hundred and fifteen employes, exclusive of outside correspondents, receive their pay envelopes weekly at the cashier's desk of The Toronto Daily Star.

The aim of this great organization is to see that the world's news speedily and accurately gathered and adequately illustrated, shall reach readers of The Toronto Daily Star in all parts of Ontario with the least possible delay. The Toronto Daily Star prints news while it is still news. Seventeen telegraph wires carry it into The Star Office, where it is set up on twenty-four typesetting machines.

Great presses with a capacity of 1,200 thirty-two-page papers per minute race against time to give the latest news at the earliest moment. In a single year $357,000 worth of white paper passes through them and is transformed into The Toronto Daily Star. Fast motor cars rush the papers to the trains, and in far corners of the Province the readers get "the news while it is still news." The Daily Star endeavors to combine with this quick service such features of general information as will make it a welcome visitor in every home—a sane, readable editorial page, a page especially devoted to women and their viewpoint, a page of bedtime stories for kiddies and fashion hints for mothers, and clean "comics" for everybody.
