Spent 20 Years In County Goal

An inmate of the County Gaol for over twenty years, Reuben Prentice died yesterday after a short illness. But little is known of the old man, who was about seventy years old. He is said to have come from Heathcote, and was first committed to gaol in 1895, for his own safety and good rather than for any offence, as he was weak-minded though quite harmless. Since then he has been an inmate, except for a short time when he was placed in the House of Refuge, and another brief interval when he was released and went to Egremont. But for many years he has been in the gaol, coming up regularly for his commitment for six years he has been in the gaol, for six months on a nominal charge of vagrancy. He was a quiet, inoffensive man and gave no trouble to anyone. His death was the result of old age. A formal inquest was held at the goal on Wednesday.—Advertiser.

Who Are These Men?

THE FIRST was a dirty, uncouth peasant, but he played a leading part in the disruption of a nation. He held no portfolio, yet he swayed a court as did no Minister of the Crown. He was without holy orders, yet people called him "monk," and no churchman of his generation exercised so profound an influence in the empire to which he belonged.

THE SECOND, with a private income of $20,000 per year, has been called the "eyes and ears" of one of the allied rulers. No titles have been conferred upon him; he has received no reward—apparently wants none. Yet he witnessed Germany's preparations for the Great War and warned his nation of its approach. He acted as its secret but unofficial agent after war had been declared, and, though without office, was closer to the heart of the struggle than any member of his country's cabinet.

THE THIRD, a general in the allied armies, was born in a railway shanty. He would not have been fighting Germany to-day if an Alsatian lad (his ancestor), had not escaped from a Bavarian press gang in 1744. Do you know him?

Rasputin, the self-constituted monk, who played so sinister a role in the downfall of the Russian dynasty. COL. EDWARD HOUSE, the confidential emissary and adviser of President Wilson. GEN. J. J. PERSHING, whose ancestors were Pfirschings, and who to-day heads the overseas forces of the United States—these are the three men pictured and described.

Russia collapsed, and The Toronto Daily Star published the story of the "mysterious one" who had led its court's excesses.

President Wilson declared war, and The Toronto Daily Star gave to its readers a series of articles on the confidential work of the man who had most influenced him.

The American forces began to make themselves felt, and The Toronto Daily Star presented the life-story of their great leader.

The Toronto Daily Star Alone in Ontario has Published their Histories

This policy will be continued. The Toronto Daily Star will endeavor to lift, for its readers, the curtain of diplomacy and intrigue and give them a glimpse at the great personalities on the world's stage.

For this purpose alone—it has twenty - four world - famous correspondents at the Peace Conference—They will keep Star readers fully informed upon every development.

The Toronto Daily Star has been famous for its feature stories. It published Harry Lauder's great book as a serial. Sir Frederick Smith, the Attorney-General of England, visited Canada, and The Star gave its readers his book of personal impression.

At the first of this year The Star began the publication of two outstanding Canadian stories of the war. The first, "My Three Years in a German Prison," by Hon. Dr. Henri S. Beland, M.P., former Postmaster-General of Canada, is in some respects Canada's most notable contribution to the literature of the war. The second, "From Mons to the Rhine with the Canadian Army," is a diary by Lieut.-Col. John A. Cooper, a distinguished Canadian journalist, describing the last and perhaps most spectacular phase of Canada's part in the Great War. Further important features, the best available, will be announced from time to time.

The main thing is you will want to read them. Don't take chances of missing the big stories. Subscribe for The Star and send your subscription in now. For 1 month, 25c. For 3 months, 75c. For 6 months, $1.50. For 12 months, $3.00.
