Mrs. Daniel Gordon gave a most delightful tea at the principal's residence on Thursday, in honor of the wives of the visiting doctors. It was all most informal and everybody had tea on the verandah. DIVIDE MILLIONS.

The Wealth Of Vanderbilts To Be Distributed.

New York, July 6.—The extensive festivities to be held at the Breakers, Newport, the summer home of Mrs. Alice G. Vanderbilt, next month, will have as a feature the distribution of one of America's greatest fortunes.

On the date of the fete Miss Gladys Moore Vanderbilt attains her legal age, and will come into possession of the millions left her by her father. She is the youngest of five direct heirs.

The Cornelius Vanderbilt fortune was estimated in value seven years ago, when the will was filed, variously at from $80,000,000 to $120,000,000. Experts who have kept track of the fluctuations in securities, such as make up the bulk of the wealth, say that aside from the real estate holdings the estate is worth at least ten per cent. more than it represented at the time of Mr. Vanderbilt's death.

Incidentally Miss Gladys Vanderbilt will probably be in her own right the richest eligible young woman in America. The direct inheritance of $7,500,000, received under the will, with accrued income, has been so skilfully manipulated by the executors, that it is said to represent now approximately $10,000,000. Added to this is a one-fourth interest in the estate of $10,000,000 provided for her mother, Mrs. A. G. Vanderbilt, during her natural life. This will conservatively bring the fortune of Miss Vanderbilt to $12,500,000.

A large force of clerks and accountants have been kept busy for many weeks at the offices of the Vanderbilt estate, Forty-second and Madison avenue, making preparations for the distribution of the stupendous fortune.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, who, it will be remembered, quarrelled with his father, will not benefit by this settlement. He was left $1,500,000, which at the time was considered a mere pittance compared to the other divisions. His brother, Alfred, who received the lion's share, gave him $6,000,000, which was said to be all he was to expect.

MRS. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT.

A New York banker is reported to have said that Cornelius handled the $7,500,000 so well that it is now double that amount.

Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, who was Gertrude Vanderbilt, and Reginald C. Vanderbilt, will have but little coming to them at this time, save legacies to beneficiaries. It is said Reginald will get approximately $2,500,000, Alfred G., who already has received far more than any of the other children, will still receive more than Gladys at the coming distribution. He does not receive the full amount left him until he is thirty-five. As it is, he is richer than all of the others combined.

Mrs. Vanderbilt received by her husband's will $2,000,000 outright, and a life income of $250,000 per year.

Dog-Proof Armor.

Paris, July 6.—A police dog competition was held at Rouen, yesterday, at which points were given for the manner in which the animals attacked a man representing a criminal. The dogs were unmuzzled, and the man was protected from bites by a suit of thick leather, top boots, a strong mask and gauntlets lined with steel rings.

The silly season being now on, the scare press is again busy trying to work up a revolt in India.

BRITISH NAVY SCANDAL.

Parliamentary Committee Unearths System Of Graft.

"Grave irregularities" is the term the Parliamentary Committee on Public Accounts gives to certain conditions in the navy on which it issued a report recently. The committee found that a widespread custom was the acceptance of commissions from contractors by petty officers, but the report adds that severe disciplinary measures have been adopted to suppress the custom.

The committee objects strongly to the action of the Admiralty in contracting for the construction of the armored cruisers Invincible, Inflexible and Indomitable without competition, although the Admiralty officials explained that they wished to keep the plans secret.

The committee finds that the builders of the battleship King Edward VII. secretly patched up a defective cast rudder, which the Government was obliged to replace. The builders gathered together a few of their employes on a certain Sunday, and by electric welding, concealed a huge fault in the rudder.

The report of the committee says: "We hope it will not again be our duty to investigate a case where a British firm, for commercial advantage, will callously hazard the lives of hundreds of their fellow-countrymen."

RIOT AT OXFORD.

Truncheons And Fire Hose Used In Fierce Fight.

Consequent on the great excitement caused amongst the junior members of Oxford University by the gaining by Christ Church of the headship of the river, and the great success of Merton in the boat races, an attempt was made to set fire to the stand erected upon the pageant ground, which adjoins Christ Church meadow and Merton fields. The design had been anticipated, and precautions had been adopted, a force of police, reinforced by members of the Volunteer Fire Brigade, who attended with one of their steam fire-engines, having been engaged by the committee. Bonfires were lighted as usual by the undergraduates in the Merton fields, and when the available fuel grew scarce a rush was made by two or three hundred of them for the planks and other material on the other side of the river. On endeavoring to cross the bridge they received a check, but only momentarily. A large number of punts were brought down by a detachment of the attacking force from Magdalen, and these, being massed together, enabled the undergraduates to get in the rear of the police, who were defending the bridge. The fire brigade were then summoned, and directed their hose upon the crowd, but owing to the state of excitement of the young men, this had no effect in stopping the rush, and a free fight ensued. The police were compelled to use their truncheons, and consequently fell back, confining their exertions to an endeavor to preserve the grand stand. Meanwhile, the crowd swarmed over the ground, cut the hose, and set fire to the secretary's tent, the flames being fed by a large number of chairs and the loose timber lying about the ground. Several attempts were afterwards made to gain a footing on the stand, but the firemen having replaced their hose the assailants were either washed off or thrown off by the police. The excitement lasted until soon after midnight, when the undergraduates gradually dispersed, having committed damage to the extent of several hundred pounds. No arrests were made, and it was only owing to the forbearance of the police that the consequences were not much more serious.

Christian Consistency.

Any one is at perfect liberty, of course, to accept the Bible as absolutely infallible, and to regard every command laid down therein as being binding upon him. But I have a right to demand that he be fully consistent with that position, and that he carry out in his actions what he declares true in his speech. Whenever I find any man carrying out to the full every command in the sermon on the Mount I will grant him the right to declare the infallibility of the Bible. Until then, such a claim must be regarded as inconsistent and absurd.
