A New Year

Following is the substance of an address given by Rev. Mr. Humphreys of Priceville to the E. L. of his church on New Years evening:

"Take this child and nurse him for me" —Ex. 2-9.

To morrow will be 1898. Another new time-child greets us, and, like all these time children, comes to us from the hand of God. Moses was not the lineal child of Pharaoh's daughter, but in her sweet womanly sympathy she rescued the babe from its peril, clasped him to the royal bosom, claimed him for her own, and yet because she loved him and for his good she put him out to nurse. This is parabolic picturing. Our God hands over another infant to our keeping, love and nurture; and on his brow is written, not the work of the beast, but the name of God—the year of our Lord 1898. Yes, it is a new-born child that is put into our arms. Into it, alas! will intrude the vices we mourn, the tyrranies from which we revolt, and the anti-christ that haunts the world.

As in God's wondrous providence Moses' nurse was Moses' mother too, so we with faithful mother-love take this new-born year from the hands of our gracious Father. To the true mother, gazing into her infant's face, comes a whole world of imagery, forecasting the probabilities, the possibilities, that are written there. One thing the child is sure to bring is Opportunity. Whatever the objective of each hour may be, each turn of the kaleidoscope presents us with opportunity in ever varying hue and form. Into whatever pattern the circumstances may fall, whether pain or pleasure, loss or gain, encouragement or disappointment, mazelike perplexity or simpled revealing, all gives opportunity for turning the transient scene to everlasting account. To each of us God has now given another year full of opportunities of growth, victory and fidelity to his kingdom. Shall I not rather say, He has loaned it. He may resume it. It may be our last. We may precede it into the invisible, the silent land. But while we have it it is a solemn as well as a gracious trust.

God gives into our arms this new year and says, "Nurse it for me," which demands our affection, vigilant purpose, unsleeping self denial, perpetual consecration, so that into every passing hour we may put its own appointed dutiful blessed meaning. Spiritual ennui, pessimism, despair find no home in the diligent soul, but a grave, and noble joy grows steadily, surely into a solemn, tender glory, when we render back each time-child redeemed from sin and vanity and clothed with a holy heavenly beauty. And then we shall have our wages. I know that love asks no wages. None the less, but all the more they are forthcoming. We have them in good part now, the earnest of the spirit and the assured hope of eternal life, and in the glorious endless future a perfect consecration and wider range of service and a fuller sharing of the Master's joy and an abundant entrance into a heavenly home. And for this Time, venerable but not decrepid, bears us onward to Eternity.

"'Tis a lying spirit that goes backward"—Dr. Arnold.
