HERO OF CATASTROPHE

JOHN FEGO SAVED FIFTEEN FROM DROWNING.

No Action Likely to be Taken Against Capt. Cline, of the Sirius —Massena in Mourning.

Massena, N.Y., Aug. 3.—Grief-stricken Massena is shrouded in deep gloom. In various parts of the city streamers of crepe are mute evidence of the toll collected in the sinking of the excursion steamer Sirius in the Grass river.

With curling eddies racing about her beams, the fated Sirius lies crosswise in the current, more than half submerged. Drooping from her forward mast is a bedraggled Canadian Jack.

The water is pouring into her cabins and it is expected that her position on the mud bed will remain unchanged till the inspectors have viewed her, when it is planned to raise the steamer and continue traffic.

While there are hints of criminal proceedings being instituted, it is the general belief here that Capt. Weston U. Cline and his men were helpless in the grip of six-mile currents and the frenzied movement of the passengers, which combined to founder the boat.

To the herculean efforts of John Frego, Charles P. Williams, of Massena, and Rev. Theopalus Wells, of Evans Mills, are given the credit for minimizing the number of fatalities.

John Frego will probably receive his reward in the shape of a medal. He was sitting with his baby boy on a life raft on the pilot house. His wife was some yards away from him when the boat began to tremble under the inrush of water in the hold.

Telling his little boy to cling to the railing on the upper deck, Frego rushed over to where his wife was holding tight to the railing with one hand and clasping her baby, one and a half years old, with a vice-like grip in the other. It was several seconds before Frego could pry the child from the half senseless woman. He carried it back to the other son, aged three, and told him to hang tight to his brother.

When Frego returned to rescue his wife a hand and hat were the only signs of Mrs. Frego visible above the water. After pulling her up on deck, Frego returned to the life saving, clutching waving hands as their owners sank beneath the water. He saved more that fifteen by this method.

"When I woke up this morning I was crying. I couldn't stop. Then I went over and kissed my wife and children, I was so happy."

This was John Frego's simple statement of heroism that will earn for him substantial recognition from many fathers and mothers in Massena who owe their own lives or their children's to the stalwart Frenchman.

One women in sheer gratitude for his courage in rescuing her baby threw her arms about Frego's neck and kissed him.

In danger of perishing herself, Mrs. Florence Dowe, of Massena, saved the lives of her two babies. When the boat careened the mother seized the children, aged two and four, and jumped into the water. While she sank in water over her head, she held the two children above the surface and breasted her way to the shore.

Teachers to Wear Crepe.

Ogdensburg, N.Y., Aug. 4.—The bodies of Miss Harriet A. Parker and Miss Nellie E. Parker were brought here from Massena and taken to the home of their brother, Frederick Parker, in Washington street. The funeral was held yesterday at the Methodist Episcopal church.

The Misses Parker were spending their vacation with their aunt, Mrs. Raymond, of Massena. The three were sitting together on the upper deck of the Sirius when they were startled by the rocking of the boat. The aunt cried out that she believed the boat was sinking and ran to the other side of the deck. The Misses Parker remained in their seats. Mrs. Raymond clung to the netting along the rail of the upper side of the boat while her nieces were found clinging to the railing on the other side of the steamer.

At a meeting of the public school teachers of the city it was decided that all should wear a badge of mourning for sixty days ont of respect to the memory of Miss Nellie E. Parker, a member of the staff of No. 1 school.

ACCIDENT AT WOLFE ISLAND.

Wolfe Island, Aug. 3.—A sad accident befell the youngest daughter of the late Mrs. Thomas Murphy, whereby the unfortunate girl lost the fingers on her right hand to the first joint. She was playing with another sister hide-and-seek in a field where a binder was in operation, and driven by her brother. The girl, who is only eleven years of age, ran around the binder to hide and without a thought grasped the knotter, which mangled her fingers so badly that Dr. Spankie deemed it advisable to have her removed to the hospital, where the fingers were taken off at the first joint.

Herman Staley was removed to the Hotel Dieu hospital yesterday, suffering from typhoid fever. James Duffy is also confined in the above place.

William Healey, who has been seriously ill, is improving, as is also John Lacey.

Mr. Southall, cheese maker, in the Front factory, has been ill for the past ten days. Mr. Fitzgerald, maker in Silver Spring, has been kindly helping him out by taking milk from his patrons. E. M. Kingsley and brother, Dr. P. J., and his little son, Quinn, are enjoying their holidays with their parents. The Misses McDonald, of Cornwall, are the guests of Mrs. A. McLaren.

Mrs. Cough, Watertown, is the guest of Mrs. Herbert Dawson. Mrs. Otis Robertson, Cape Vincent, is the guest of Miss Kate McGlynn. Mr. and Mrs. Coyle, Rochester, N.Y., are visiting at Mrs. James Coyle's, also Miss Esther Brigeland, Kingston. Miss Mattie Davis, Watertown, is spending her holidays with her parents. Miss O'Hallerin, New Brunswick, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. John Murphy. Mrs. Matthews, of New York city, is holidaying at Mr. and Mrs. Frank Greenwood's. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burke, of Syracuse, are guests at the Conley House, Reid's Bay, also Mrs. VanBuren and Miss VanBuren.

CANADA'S LOSS.

Forest Fires Have Cost Dominion Incomprehensible Sums.

The disaster which swept over Northern Ontario so recently recalls the ever-insistent fact that every bush fire in Canada means untold losses to the natural resources of the country.

The loss which Canada has suffered from forest fires during the past century is beyond comprehension. The actual extent of the waste is hard to ascertain, but the data supplied shows in a general manner the degree to which the wealth of the country has suffered through the burning of timber. This they estimate at no less than 2,185 billion feet and if the stumpage value is placed at the low sum of fifty cents per thousand feet (the smallest royalty collected by any Canadian Government), the loss to the public treasury has been $1,042,000,000. This means that for every foot of timber that has ever been cut in Canada at least seven feet have been destroyed by fire. In the Ottawa Valley it is believed that fully twenty feet have been burned for every one cut by the lumberman.

Notwithstanding the efforts made to check timber destruction by fire the authers estimate what is annually lost in this way as probably as much as is annually cut for use. This is an alarming amount, all the more so since Canada has no timber to spare. All the areas of useful timbers existing in the world are now discovered and being exploited. The only countries now exporting timber in quantity are Sweden, Norway, Russia, Austria, the United States and Canada, and of these all, or nearly all, except Canada and Russia, are cutting in excess of the yearly growth. The Dominion and the forest provinces have a magnificent asset in their timber and the necessity of fire protection and reforestration are patent. The authors of a recent official bulletin hold that forest fires are largely preventable and that their occurrence is due not so much to lack of laws as to lack of enforcement of existing laws. Canada, they state finally, of all the civilized nations in the northern hemisphere is doing the least to treat the public lands as a permanent asset.

The Latest Athletic Idol.

A few years ago Tom Longboat set half the youths of Canada running, and after he had ceased to be the centre of public interest, Bobby Kerr made people feel that there was something in Hamilton more famous than the mountain. Then some time elapsed in which no one could claim to be the popular idol of the athletic world, but the position is now held by a man who should retain it for some time. George Goulding may safely lay claim to being the finest walker in the world, and there is no one on the horizon at the present time likely to dispute his right to the position.

Goulding won his fame slowly. He went to the Olympic games without anyone expecting him to make a showing, and little attention was paid to the fact that he came back without trophies. While he was abroad, Goulding had learned a few things and he soon began to show his class. He chopped down all the Canadian records, and even established at least one for the world. Then various champion walkers desired to meet him, but he disposed of all comers with apparent ease. In fact the remarkable thing about Goulding is that he has never yet appeared to have shot his bolt, but he always seems to have his races well in hand.

In the Village Class.

Did you ever see a passenger train stopped half way out of the Grand Central Station in New York or the Broad Street Station at Philadelphia, or even the Exchange Street Station in Buffalo, all for the sake of a woman with a market basket? Not much. Yet Toronto is still in the village class when it comes to holding up trains at the Union Station for belated travelers. The other afternoon, to take one instance, Grand Trunk No. 24, which runs out through Markham and Stouffville, was just gathering head when a worthy old dame came panting down the platform in its trail. Conductor Buller on the rear platform spotted her and gave the stop signal. No. 24 jarred up suddenly with all brakes on. Brakey hurried back and relieved the old woman of her parcels, finally getting her safe aboard. Then No. 24 started off again; minus about sixty seconds of her time. It was all very polite and considerate, don't you know, but hardly city style.—Saturday Night.

Asbestos Mines.

The mines of Canada to-day produce the major portion of the asbestos used in the industrial world. For six decades or more it was known that Canada possessed this mineral, but the fact was not considered of commercial importance. In 1877 a farmer discovered deposits of considerable area and the first real mine began operations shortly afterward. It is said that the enterprise was a paying one from the start. Asbestos was first mined in Italy, and prior to 1880 it was the only country that produced it at a commercial profit. The Italian asbestos is very silky in appearance and gray or brown in color. Often the fibres are several feet in length.

Wild Geese Are Monogamists.

Poetic license was indulged in by the author who wrote "No goose so gray but some time, soon or late, she'll find a courtly gander for a mate." The fact is wild geese are monogamists, and a gander that has lost his mate becomes an odd one, or, in other words, a lonesome old fellow forever. Sometimes, but not frequently, a goose that has lost her gander mate will mate again, but it is not common among wild geese. The rule does not hold, however, among the domestic fowl.
