The average number of deaths from accidents in England and Wales, during last ten years was 1000 deaths a week, or one fifth, were deaths by accidents. Another source of accidents is falls of the roofs, the average of deaths resulting from which is not less than 400. During the last ten years upwards of 3900 deaths have been caused in that way. Another cause of accidents has been attributed to the inefficiency of the Government system of inspection. In some colliery districts there are miles of subterranean roads, and it is very impossible, except by the most vigilant system of inspection, for the inspectors themselves to completely guard against accidents. The chance of such accidents happening to underground working as to railway travelling is the great safeguard against accidents by explosion, and is readily effected by working the pillars on the "double shaft" system, or by sending in fresh gangs every eight hours. This system prevails universally in the north of England, but is vehemently opposed by colliers in other districts.

EFFECT OF ADVERTISING.—It is amusing at times to observe the stores of the merchants who don't advertise; to see the anxious proprietors looking into the streets and see the people go by, wondering why they don't come in, while the stores of their neighbours who do advertise are thronged with customers. Some people will learn by observation, others will not.—Daily Palladium.

ART OF ADVERTISING.—Horace Greeley, of New York, says:—The most successful business men in this city are those who have advertised liberally and constantly. A small advertisement constantly appearing is better than a display column occasionally.
