VICINITY CHIPS

Mrs. W. A. Armstrong is visiting her daughter, Mrs. S. DeCudmore, Montreal.

Mr. Jos. LeGard spent the week end in Toronto.

Mr. T. S. Merrick, of Sherwood, North Dakota, is visiting with his cousin, Mrs. Cargo, for a short time.

Mr. Will Sanderson of Chicago arrived here on Thursday last to be with his mother, Mrs. J. Sanderson, who is ill.

Miss Hattie Wallace of Toronto is nursing Mrs. J. Sanderson, who is slightly improved.

Miss Irene Gaudin, who is studying nursing in a Philadelphia hospital, visited Vandeleur friends for a couple days last week.

While splitting some wood on Thursday last Mr. Mark Wilson, jr., had a narrow escape from serious injury to his eye, when a splinter off the block of wood flew up and struck him just below the left eye, making two nasty cuts.

The Women's Institute will meet in the high school on Wednesday, Dec. 3rd. Business meeting to start promp'ly at 2 30. Mrs. McVicar will give a talk on "The kingship of self control" and Mrs. Wilcox on "Inexpensive Christmas gifts. Duet by Mrs. M. Wilson and Miss Rene Cargo. All are invited.

A well known farmer of this vicinity was up before J. McMullen and D. McTavish, J. P's, on Friday last, charged by Mr. Oliver Turner of Eugenia with stealing a sheep. Mr. Turner swore to the loss of his sheep and identified the skin, which in the meantime had been sold to Mr. Mark Wilson, butcher, in town. The magistrates sent the accused up for trial but granted bail of $1000. Hon. I. B. Lucas is defending the accused.

Mrs. (Rev.) S. D. Gaudin, of Cross Lake mission, Man., has been visiting eastern friends and called on relatives here for a day or so last week. She left Toronto for Winnipeg this week Previous to the construction of the Hudson Bay railway the winter trip was made by dog train 400 miles up Lake Winnipeg. Now it is by the railway by way of The Pas to within 35 miles of her home. Her husband will meet her in Winnipeg. Mrs. Gaudin is field matron under the Indian Dept.

The various deer hunting parties from this vicinity returned home last week and most of them with their full complement of game. The Flesherton and Rock Mills parties had their full complement of fine large deer. The weather was fairly favorable for hunting and also for keeping the meat. More hunters than usual visited the north country this year and the quantity of game brought out was enormous. There is no gainsaying the fact that game is becoming scarcer every year, at least in the immediate north, and it is only a matter of a few years until hunters will have to go further afield to find their game. Many hunting parties came out of the Parry Sound District this year with only one, two or three deer to their credit. This was especially true of the arm chair variety of sports who hunted close to the railway. The game is being driven further and further back and becoming more difficult to secure.

F. T. Hill & Co. have purchased the Markdale flour mill from J. W. Ford.

Thieves broke into the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Irwin at Windsor on Saturday night and smashing open the front door, stole everything in the house except the furniture. The loss amounted to $500. Mrs. Irwin is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lawler, 8th line Artemesia.

Mr. Wm. Buchanan gave a talk on his travels and experieuces towards the end of the war and his trip into Germany, at the Young People's Society in the Methodist church on Monday evening which was enjoyed by all. Next Monday evening the society will have a Mock Parliament. Everybody is cordially invited.

While up north hunting, The Advance man saw a large garter snake on Nov. 15, which had not yet taken up its winter quarters. The reptile was quite lively and was coiled up carefully watching a whisky jack, which evidently thought he would like to tackle Mr. Snake, but decided that discretion was the better part of valor, as the snake was a little too big and lively for him.

Lawrance Lindsay, of Grand Valley, came in contact with a slow moving auto coming out of the alley-way at Swain's hotel on Saturday evening. Apparently the young chap had his head turned against the stormy wind blowing at the time and went right into the car. The fender knocked him to the pavement, the front wheel passing over his toes. It was a close call to a very serious accident.

David Tortington, a farmer aged 50 years, residing on lot 8, con. 2, Adjala, was burned to death in his home about midnight last Thursday. The other inmates of the house, Hugh Tortington, a brother of the unfortunate man, Mrs. George Bagnell, who kept house for the two brothers, and Claude Tortington, a son of Hugh Tortington, had the good fortune to escape from the burning house.

REPAIR FARM BUILDINGS

How and When to Paint Them Efficiently.

In the Fall the Buildings, Like Machinery, Should Be as Thoroughly Overhauled as Labor Conditions Permit—Broken Windows Should Be Repaired, Dust and Cobwebs Cleaned Away and the Premises Brightened by Cleaning and Whitewash.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

EVERY farmer should care for his farm buildings in such a way as to maintain them in good serviceable condition and so conserve his resources generally. On most farms there are many details in themselves of minor importance, but in the aggregate of tremendous influence. Carelessness of the exterior of buildings is an indication, generally, of the conditions existing in their interior. Slovenly surroundings and general run-down conditions are the hall-marks of ineptitude and mismanagement.

The farmer may not be able to change the location of his farm, but to a great extent he can control its appearance and general conditions by seeing that the roofs are in good repair and weather tight. the fences in place, gates in order and painted, on hinges, not sagging or dragging on the ground, the latches and hinges of all doors and gates greased and operating freely; no broken lights in the window sashes of the various buildings; the stable fixtures in order, the stanchions and partitions in place, and the mangers and floor in good repair, giving to the whole place the impression that it receives prudent care and regular attention.

Investigations have disclosed the fact that concrete is an ideal material for repairing and making in the hands of a resourceful person on the farm. Publications issued by cement manufacturers as to tools and materials used, aggregates, proportioning the mixture, how to mix, how to plan forms, reinforcement, etc., may be obtained for the asking.

Doors—The ordinary stable door construction of two thicknesses of matched lumber is not satisfactory, because the effect of the warm moist air of the stable on the inside ply of lumber causes it to swell, while the outer lumber, being less affected, causes the door to spring out top and bottom. A panelled door is less affected because the expansion and contraction resulting from atmospheric conditions is taken up by the panels.

To hang a door hold it up against the jambs and mark round with a pencil. Then cut down to these lines. Make it ⅛ narrower and ⅜ shorter. The hinges should be placed about six inches from the top and the lower one ten inches from the floor. The thickness of the casing should be taken from the total width of the hinge, the balance, divided by two, gives the distance the hinge is to set back from the face side of the door. In all cases the hinge should be wide enough to reach across two-thirds of the thickness of the door. Heavy doors should have three hinges. The mortise for the hinge of the door should bevel slightly toward the front, so that the hinge will not strike the jamb.

Setting locks for the door — Rim locks are those that are simply screwed on to the face of the door. Mortise locks are those set into a mortise in the door itself. The rim lock is held in position and marked for keyhole, knob-bar hole, and screw holes. The first two are cut and the last are bored and the lock screwed into place. The escutcheon and knob plates are put on, and the keeper is then put on to the jamb.

The mortise lock is set into the mortise cut in the door just wide and deep enough to admit it, the face plate of the lock being set flush with the face of the edge of the door. Mark for the knob-bar and keyhole holes. Set the lock and fasten in; the knob plates and escutcheon set, and knobs adjusted. The keeper is then mortised into its proper place, flush with the edge of the jamb.

Roof.—See that the roof is tight. Remember that there are shingles and shingles. The old standard size 18 inches long—five butts together to equal 2¼ inches — are superior in several ways to the present method of cutting them to 16 inches long, six butts of two inches. Much depends on the way the shingle is manufactured. A roughly cut shingle will not give good service because of its tendency to draw the water up under the weather line by capillary attraction, and the "fuzz" harbors dust, making good hold for moss to start growing. The edging should be smooth and carefully done so that the butts are slightly narrower than the points so as to allow any debris to pass through the joints and not accumulate and start a rot.

Cattle Ties and Mangers. — The comfort of the cattle is of great importance as it affects the milk production and their feeding qualities. Whatever type of manger is used simplicity of construction, convenience of feeding and cleaning should be considered.

The swivel of the chain cow-tie should be examined to see if it works freely. In any case apply a little grease to it. Any weak or broken links may be neatly and effectually secured by using a slit-link or a wire link made out of two or three turns of fence wire through the links, allowing the ends long enough to be crossed and wound round the strands in opposite direction after the manner of the lineman's splice. The stanchions, links and swivels should be attended to in similar way.
