THE TRUST AND LOAN COMPANY OF CANADA make advances on mortgage security of City, Town or Farm Property, in sums ranging from $400 upwards, and for periods to suit borrowers; interest at 8 per cent. per annum, payable half yearly. Approved mortgages, also, purchased at the Company's rates.

Borrowers have the option of repaying the principal either by annual instalments or in one sum at the end of the term. If the security prove satisfactory, the loan may be renewed for a further term.

The expenses will be found very moderate, and it is optional with the borrower either to have them deducted from the loan or added to the principal.

SATURDAY EVENING, MARCH 22.

Bishop Potts.

Bishop Potts of Salt Lake City was the husband of three wives and a happy father of fifteen interesting children. Early in the winter the bishop determined that his little ones should have a good time for Christmas, so he concluded to take a trip down to San Francisco to see what he could find for them in the shape of toys with which to gratify and amuse them. The good bishop packed his carpet-bag, embraced Mrs Potts one by one, and kissed each of them affectionately and started upon his journey.

He was gone a little more than a week, when he came back with fifteen beautiful mouth-organs in his valise for his darlings. He got out of the train at Salt Lake, thinking how joyous and exhilarating it would be at home on Christmas morning when the whole fifteen of those mouth-organs would be in operation upon different tunes at the same moment. But just as he entered the depot, he saw a group of women standing in the ladies' room, apparently waiting for him. As soon as he approached, the whole twenty of them rushed up, threw their arms around his neck, and kissed him, exclaiming:

"Oh, Theodore, we are so—so glad you have come back! Welcome home! Welcome, dear, dear Theodore! Welcome once more to the bosom of your family!" and then the entire score of them fell upon his neck and cried over his shirt front and mussed him.

The bishop seemed surprised and embarrassed. Struggling to disengage himself, he blushed and said:

"Really, ladies, this kind of thing is well enough—it is interesting and all that; but there must be some kind of a—that is, an awkard sort of a—excuse me, ladies, but there seems to be, as it were, a slight misunderstanding about the—I am Bishop Potts."

"We know it, we know it, dearest," they exclaimed in chorus, "and we are so glad to see you safe, safe at home. We have all been right well while you were away, love."

"It gratifies me," remarked the Bishop, "to learn that none of you have become a prey to disease. I am filled with blitheful serenity when I contemplate the fact; but really I do not understand why you should rush into this railway station and hug me because your lives are active and your digestion good. The precedent is bad; it is dangerous."

"Oh, but we didn't" they exclaimed in chorus. "We came here to welcome you because you are our husband."

"Pardon me, but there must be some little—that is to say, as it were I should think not. Women, you have mistaken your man!"

"Oh, no, dearest," they shouted, "we were married to you while you were away!"

"What!" exclaimed the bishop; "you do not mean to say that—"

"Yes, love. Our husband, William Brown, died on Monday, and on Tuesday Brigham had a vision, in which he was directed to seal us to you; and so he performed the ceremony at once, by proxy."

"Th-th-th-th-under!" observed the bishop, in a general sort of way.

"And darling, we are all living with you now—we and the near children."

"Children! children!" exclaimed Bishop Potts, turning pale; "you don't mean to say there is a pack of children too!"

"Yes, love, but only one hundred and twenty-five, not counting the twins and the triplets."

"Wha-wha-wha-wha-what d' you say;" grasped the bishop, in a cold perspiration? "one hundred and twenty-five! One hundred and twenty-five children and twenty more wives! It is too much—it is awful!" and the bishop set down and groaned, while the late Mrs Brown, the brides, stood around in a semicircle, and fanned him with their bonnets all except the redhaired one, and she in her trepidation made a futile effort to fan him with the coal scuttle.

But after a while the bishop became reconciled to his new alliance, knowing well that protest would be unavailing; so he walked home, holding as many of the little hands of the brides as he could conveniently grasp in his, while the red-haired woman carried his umbrella and marched in front of the parade to remove obstruction and a score of small boys.

When the bishop reached the house, he went around among the cradles which filled the back parlor, and the two second-story rooms, and attempted with such earnestness to become acquainted with his new sons and daughters that he set the whole one hundred and twenty-five and the twins to crying, while his own original fifteen stood around and joined in the chorus. Then the bishop went out and sat on the garden fence to whittle a stick and think, while Mrs Potts distributed herself around in twenty-three different places and soothed the children. It occurred to the bishop while he mused out there on the fence, that he had not enough mouth organs to go around among the children, as the family now stood, and so, rather than seem to be partial, he determined to go back to San Francisco for one hundred and forty-four more.

So the bishop repacked his carpet bag and began again to bid farewell to his family. He tenderly kissed all of Mrs. Potts who were at home, and started for the depot, while Mrs. Potts stood at the various windows, and waved her handkerchiefs at him—all except the woman with the warm hair, and she, in a fit of absent mindedness, held one of the twins by the leg and brandished it at Potts as he fled down the street.

The bishop reached San Francisco, completed his purchases, and was just about to get on the train with his one hundred and forty-four organs, when a telegram was handed him. It contained information to the effect that the auburn haired Mrs. Potts had just had a daughter. This induced the bishop to return to the city for the purpose of purchasing an additional organ.

On the following Saturday he returned home. As he approached his house a swarm of young children fled out of the front gate and ran towards him, shouting "There's pa! Here comes pa! Oh, pa, but we're glad to see you! Hurrah for pa!" etc. etc.

The bishop looked at the children as they flocked around him and clung to his legs and coat, and was astonished to see that they were neither his nor the late Brown's. He said, "You youngsters, you have made a mistake; I am not your father," and the bishop smiled good-naturedly.

"Oh yes, you are, though!" screamed the little ones in chorus.

"But I say I am not," said the bishop severely and frowning, "you ought to be ashamed of yourselves. Don't you know where little story tellers go? It is scandalous for you to violate the truth in this manner. My name is Potts."
