The Czar's peace congress is now in session, but little hope is entertained that it will result in any practical advantage to the prospects of universal peace. Czar Nicholas' sincerity is discredited. Were he to ask for a congress of arbitration upon the methods he has adopted in coercing the Finlanders and destroying their individuality as a nation, or his persecution of the Jews, or his muzzling of the freedom of speech, the world would extend a more lively interest in his alleged benevolent schemes that it at present accords.

The redistribution bill was introduced into parliament last week and upon the face of it appears to be built upon a fair basis, but in its working out may not prove so fair. Each electoral district will follow county lines and a commission of judges shall decide the make-up of each district. The bill, too, is made for Ontario alone, the other provinces having little or no attention paid to them. Just why Ontario should have this honor thrust upon her is not made clear, unless it is that she did not give a majority for the present government at the last election.

Admiral Dewey is on his way to the United States. When he arrives this greatest of commanders that the world has ever seen!—this master hand at pumping war material into and sinking old wooden battle ships! will receive an ovation greater than Napoleon ever got. Public adulation will go wild. He will be feasted, toasted, boasted, wined and dined; the women will throw themselves at him in droves; he will be given the freedom of the "universe" and there will be a general blowing out of pent-up gas. Knowing what he has to look forward to, it is a marvel that Dewey could ever be persuaded to return home! We know he is very brave and would willingly excuse him this very severe test.

The British Columbia Legislature has raised the fee on Chinese immigrants from $50 to a prohibitory fee of $500 per head. Whether we are justifiable in thus debarring the Chinese from our country is a matter open to doubt when looked at from the humanitarian standpoint It is said that Chinese do not come here with the intention of becoming citizens, but merely to make money which they take back home to China. Dr. Kilborn, a returned missionary, who spoke here recently, said that on the other hand, there was not an Anglo-Saxon in China to-day who intends to remain there all his life. The object of those in business there is to make a competence with which to return to their native country at some future day. Were China to impose a similar tax how many missionaries would find their way into that country? The fact of the matter is that were China to undertake so foolish a move war vessels and armies would be sent there and China would be carved cap-a-pie into sausage meat and parcelled out in strings. We send missionaries there to teach the heathen how to be good and to "love their neighbors as themselves," and follow it up by declaring that they may starve before they will be allowed to enter this country to compete with our labor. We will shoot them if they do not allow us to ply our commercial calling in their country, and we will shoot them if they come here to take the bread from our children's mouths. This item is not written in order to champion Chinese cheap labor, but merely to draw attention to the anomalies that exist among the Anglo-Saxon people. We are not perfect ourselves, and we have concessions in China which should not be imperilled by acts such as the British Columbia Legislature is guilty of.

Grand Old England

To the Editor of The Advance

DEAR SIR,—I noticed in your paper recently an account of a speech by School Inspector Campbell that gave the estimates of the various branches of the Anglo-Saxon race. The Englishman is a good all-round man, but "not especially brilliant at anything." It would not be easy to define what an Englishman is. We may assume that he is a very composite character, and it would no doubt take an expert to make an estimate of it. Napoleon said, "He never knows when he is whipped." Wellington was born in Ireland, but, he said, had he been born in a stable it would not prove him a horse He was a distant relation of John Wesley, I believe. Oliver Cromwell was a military leader of no small calibre, Spurgeon was a remarkable preacher specialist and brilliant. Shakespeare, Milton, Bacon and Newton, it has been said by those whose opinions are weighty, have not been paralleled by any other nation on earth. The history of invention in the British islands will show that John Bull is sometimes a specialist of no mean standing. Stephenson and Arkwright and Hargraves and others of that order, even the founder of the Peel family merit no small praise for inventions that began and made a success of calico printing. We are told that "the selfsame model will bring forth the selfsame men." Had he gone into my native valley in Lancashire and mingled among some of the factory lads, he would have found some of them who have read Mills and Macauley and who can both read, write and speak the mother tongue with elegance and propriety and many of them did not graduate in either high school or college. I received a letter recently from a factory operative there that will not, I think, suffer if compared with portions of even the finished lecture of the Inspector. The solid and all round faculties of the race, led by an aristocracy unequalled in the world, place it very high in the scale of peoples and nations. We judge people by what they have done. The Irish may be leaders of men, but confessedly they have done little for Ireland. England is the centre of the finest empire of all time, and taken together with the Yankee nation, its offspring, is all that is worthy and meritorious it is destined to play no unimportant part in the planet on which we live. Grand old England? ENGLISHMAN.

The Money Some Men Make.

First Man: "Hello Bill, what are you driving at these days, you seem to be on the jump all the time and walk as though you had important business on hand."

Second Man: "Well, the fact is, Jack, a little prosperity puts the drive in a man. I have struck a position at last, after a year of hard luck, which is panning out first rate."

First Man: "Well, what's your luck, for I am doing mighty little these days. But what have you struck?"

Second Man: "I have taken a book agency from The Brandley-Garretson Co., (Limited) of Brantford, Ont. They have been at me for months to canvass, but I laughted at the idea, and at last they made me a good offer, so I thought I'd give it a trial. I have been at the work now two months, and I like it first rate, and am going to stick to it."

First Man: Say Bill, do you think I could do the work, for I saw the advertisement of this firm yesterday, for more men."

Second Man: "I don't see why you could not, but write and get them to make you an offer."

First Man: "Thanks old man, I will, and I'll let you know how it turns out."

WANTED!!

Five young men to travel, who would not object spending part of their time at canvassing. References.

A correspondent writes: Last week's Advance contained two contributions that are worth far more than a year's subscription. I refer to the letter from Mr. E. Strain and the poem by Rev. T. Watson. I congratulate the Editor on having two such excellent contributors. Let me suggest that if Mr. Strain should visit his parental home after the war is over, that a celebration of some kind be held in Flesherton in his honor as a mark of appreciation for the exceedingly interesting and educative letters that have been published from his pen during the last year.

Bicycles for Sale from $10.00 up at J. F. Vandusen's.

Revs. Thom of Flesherton and Hunter of Markdale exchanged pulpits last Sunday. The former delivered two interesting and practical sermons to good sized congregations.—Standard Empire day was not observed in Flesherton public school. Principal Slaughter decided that the empire would not spoil if the pupils did not celebrate Mr. Rose's new school holiday this year. He was too busy with his entrance class, and evidently thinks, justifiably, too, that if the children get a thorough business education the empire will never "bust."

Many of our readers have no doubt noticed the Chinese "puzzles" in M. Richardson & Co's. store window. Few can understand the use of one article therein, and for the benefit of the uninitiated we might state that it is a tea tray, and it will also attract and hold larger "game." Mr. Richardson will be pleased to explain its mode of operation. Fearing that there might be a stampede to purchase the article, however, we must intimate that it is not for sale.

Our village fathers are getting the old hand fire-engine, which was purchased some fifteen years ago, overhauled and painted They have also placed an order for hose for the same. The old "back-racker" has never seen active service, except on one or two occasions, having spent its whole life time in modest retirement—sometimes under shelter and sometimes not Let us hope that it can be made serviceable. The next thing will be to organize a brigade to practice on it and to assign it to some position where it can be found in an emergency without making it necessary to search for it with a lantern in somebody's haymow.

We offer no apology for taking up so much of our space this week with the paper read at the missionary meeting here recently as we know that very many of our lady readers at least will peruse it with profit. It is of interest to all mothers who have children under their care, as well as to the special workers for whose benefit it was written, and inspiration can be gained therefrom. "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world," and motherhood has a vast responsibility resting upon it. We men are too engrossed in business pursuits, and do not come into continuous contact with the infant mind, and are therefore not fitted as the mothers are to mould the plastic intellect into proper chanels. We think the secular press does not pay sufficient attention to such matters, as there is a class which the denominational press does not reach and the former alone can. Believing this we give space to the article at the request of ladies at the head of the society, and hope it will be a source of interest not alone to the members but to all who come in contact with child nature in its many interesting forms

I had consulted physicians both in England and Canada without obtaining any permanent relief and tried many remedies with the same result. A friend who had been cured by Dr. Clarke's Kola Compound advised me to try it. And three bottles have entirely cured me. It is now nearly two years since my recovery, and asthma has not troubled me since. I feel very grateful to Dr. Clarke for introducing this wonderful remedy, suffering as I was, and do not know of a single case where the required number of bottles have been taken that it has failed to cure.
