FLESHERTON SHAVING PARLORS

A. N. LeGard, Prop.

If you should wish an easy shave,
As good a barber ever gave
Just call at my shaving saloon
At morn, or eve, or busy noon,
I'll cut and dress the hair with grace,
To suit the contour of the face.

My room is neat, towels clean,
Scissors sharp and razors keen
And everything I think you'll find
To suit the taste and please the mind
And all that art or skill can do
If you'll just call, I'll do for you.

I shave the young, the old, the gay,
I'll shave you all for ready pay,
And clean the head at any time,
And for a shave I get a dime;
I do not mean a dime in trust
For that would make the barber bust.

Discoverd by a Woman

Another great discovery has been made, and that too by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose, that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs Luther Lutz.' Thus writes W.C. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Sold by all Druggist at 50 cents and $1.00. Every bottle guaranted.

About two o'clock Tuesday, during an electric storm, lightning struck a chimney on the house of Mr. James Henry in town scattering the brick right and left and passing down disarranged the pipes and stove lids striking Mrs. Henry on the shoulder and ran across her breast and down the right side and leg throwing off her boot and sending the sewing machine at which she was working some four feet endwise. Mrs. Henry fell from the shock and her niece, Minnie Glasford, who, was near, sprang and caught her aunt and assisted her to bed. There was no one else in the house at the time except her little daughter Olive. The fluid tore several splinters from the floor and passed through the wall without doing serious damage. Mrs. Henry was seriously burned from shoulder to foot but no serious results are anticipated notwithstanding her previous delicate state of health, but it was a close call.—Standard

Sold by all druggists.

The marriage of Miss Margaretta Lucas of Markdale, daughter of the late George Lucas and sister of I. B. Lucas, M. P. P., Center Grey, to Mr. Walter Turner, brother of Mr. A Turner of Orangeville, took place at Christ church Markdale, Thursday, the Rev. J. F. Parke, brother-in-law of the bride, assisted by her cousin, the Rev. J. R. Newell, officiating. The bride, who wore a gown of ivory satin and marguerites, was attended by Miss Sadie Lucas in white mousseline de soie over blue. Miss Blanche Macpherson and Miss Shirley Parke, nieces of the bride, were maids of honor. Mr. Clare McGibbon acted as best man. After the ceremoney the wedding breakfast was served at the residence of the brides sister, Mrs. McPherson. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Turner left for Montreal, en rout for Europe, where they will spend the summer.—Orangeville Advertiser

Glorious News

Comes from DR. C. Cargile, of Washita, I.T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved,—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by all Druggists, every bottle guaranteed.

Taking of Caloocan—Lights and Shadows of Army Life

APALIT, April 29.—I have had some very exciting times since last I wrote you on April 12. At that time we were at Malolos, Aguinaldo's capital. When a town is taken we remain sometimes only a day and sometimes a week, then follow up the enemy. On Tuesday, April 25, the advance from Malolos began at 8 o'clock under General Wheaton's brigade of the Montana and Kansas regiments, marching in columns of fours, the Montanas on one side of the railway track and the Kansans on the other. The two regiments were halted two miles from Calumpit and took a position in a trench running at right angles from the railway track. When we had located the armor train with a 6-pound armor-piercing gun from one of the warships and rapid fire gun and two gatling guns with a gunner to man it, we advanced up the track, flanked by a detachment from the two regiments named. When half a mile from the enemy's entrenchments, lining the river on the opposite bank, the guns began a lively fusilade, which was kept up for about half an hour, and compelled the insurgents to evacuate their trenches, leaving many dead and wounded. At the same time General Hale's brigade, consisting of the South Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska regiments, assisted by batteries from the Utah and Sixth Artillery, had a lively time for two or three hours, terminating in fording the river and taking the town of Calumpit. Twenty-three of our brave boys were killed and a great many wounded. Nine in the South Dakota regiment were killed. The railway track had been torn up for some hundred feet on the Malolos side of the great iron bridge and all the ties were torn off the bridge. The railway had been cut at the upper span and one and had fallen into the river, the other end having fallen into the river. The track on the Calumpit side was torn up for a distance of over five miles. The delay in repairing the bridge gave the insurgents a chance to escape. When we entered the insurgent trenches we found a great number of dead and wounded. The crossing of the dismantled bridge was a ticklish matter and required courage. Just think of the situation—a storm of bullets striking the water and bridge all around us and we having to cross on a little iron girder, where, if we were not careful, we might drop into the river, which was about sixty feet below us. I was not so much scared of the bullets as I was of being badly wounded and drowned in the river below. We, however, got over all right without anyone being wounded. When we got across, what a sight met our gaze! Dead and wounded Philipinos were lying all around. It is surprising how hardened a person becomes. I have seen such sights for the last three months and they have ceased to trouble me any more. Just before we crossed the bridge one of our hospital men was killed. He was shot through the head, the bullet entering the jaw and coming out at the back of the head. We advanced on the enemy's right flank and drove them from behind their trenches. I can tell you things looked pretty bad. One place smelled more like a slaughter house than anything I can liken it to. Flies had collected in great numbers on account of so much blood. Before moving on we took a lot of the dead bodies and piled them into the trenches which they themselves had dug, and with some pieces of boards shovelled dirt upon them. It was pretty hard to see the wounded lying there pleading for the Americanos to do something for them. The wounded Philipinos receive but scant sympathy now from our troops, because too many of our brave boys have felt the sting of their bullets and have seen too many comrades killed and wounded to waste much sympathy upon them. I have been in the thickest of it now for about three months in the field and trenches and am thankful that I am still unhurt, but I have often seen the time when I would have given almost anything to get into a place of safety, where I would not have to follow up with the regiment, when the bullets would be striking all around me and comrades falling at my side, some killed and some wounded. There are about 24 Chinese coolies with each regiment engaged in carrying the litters. The Montana regiment is divided into three battalions. One doctor, one hospital man and four Chinamen with two litters follow up each battalion. I had four Chinamen under me. They did all the work and I carried my little Krag Georgenson and did all the ordering, telling them where to take our wounded men and seeing that they did it. It was difficult to keep them up to the firing line. As soon as the bullets commenced to drop around us they would try to dodge behind everything they came to, but when I showed them I meant business and would not put up with skulking they got down to business.

In this part of the country the insurgents seem to have had their strongest intrenchments. You could hardly imagine the array of these in and around Calumpit. An infantry advance against these intrenchments would have resulted in fearful loss to the attacking party if the natives had not been driven from their intrenchments by the cannon. The advance was over a level field, as smooth as a meadow, with no cover whatever. I have never seen such intrenchments since I came here as those around Calumpit. At other places they were as nothing in comparison—both in front and rear of the town, and for a distance of about four miles on the Malolos side. On the north side of the river they had built a regular fort, roofed with railroad and galvanized iron and containing portholes. The front wall was from three to six feet thick, and behind this covered fort trenches were dug several feet deep to allow them to pass from one place to another under cover. On the Malolos side of the river the ground had been cleared for over a thousand yards of every obstruction, so that nothing might shelter the Americans or keep back the Philipinos. It was in front of this position that the Montana regiment remained for over two hours, covering the flank movements of Gen. Hale's brigade. A great many acts of individual heroism might be related had I the time. After this day's battle, which was on Tuesday, we all retired and took a refreshing bathe in the river. One of our Montana men took cramps and was drowned before we knew he was in danger. Two lively engagements took place on Sunday but I was not in them.

You will see by the heading of this letter that I am now at a station called Apalit, about four miles past Calumpit. This is the spot where Col. Funstone crossed the Rio Grande on a raft with ten picked men from each company of the Kansas regiment. Two men swam across the river and made arrangements for towing the raft. Col. Funstone flanked the enemy, driving them out of their trenches.

I am now in very comfortable quarters in a rich Philipino planter's residence. This gentleman fled and left everything to the servants' care and requested them to get some American officers to take charge of it and protect it from looting. Major Adams took possession. It is furnished in elegant eastern style with beautiful furniture, piano, and lovely dishes and plates. We—I mean the Dr. and hospital corps and some other officers—live in grand style, waited on like lords by the servants. E. STRAIN.

From Our Own Correspondent

Not many moons ago a resident of the Durham Road essayed to clean out the soot which had accumulated in the bottom of his stove. While engaged in this operation the cleaning apparatus got fastened in some unaccountable manner, so to make a better job and also loosen the scraper the stove was overturned, the rods holding it together taken out, and in a few minutes nothing was to be seen but a pile of scrap iron. His better half viewed the heap with dismay and timidly asked her good man if he thought he could put it together again? He retorted that he could and at once commenced the work of reconstruction, but after two or three hours' arduous toil he decided to go to the nearest neighbor for help. Then another desperate and determined attempt was made to set up the disorganized mass but after breaking all plow lines on the farm the attempt failed and the good-natured and good tempered neighbor returned home in disgust. Next day the services of another neighbor were secured and this time it was either do or die. Fanning mill rods were procured and by noon the cantankerous piece of furniture was bolted together and stood on its feet once more.

A very successful barn raising took place at Mr. Charles McKinnon's on the South Line last Friday. The building is 60x40. The stone work was built by Messrs. Hector McLean and D. We regret to learn of the sudden and unexpected death of Miss Bella Wilson of Dromore, who died on Saturday last from hemorrhage of the lungs. Deceased was about twenty years of age, a bright promising, young woman, held in the highest esteem by her acquaintances and her sad death will cast a gloom over the neighborhood. She was a sister of Mr. John Wilson, butter manufacturer of Flesherton, Who is well and favorably known in this town. We extend our sympathy to the parents and family of the deceased young lady in their sad hour of bereavement.—Chronicle
