Accounts from Spanish sources of the fight between the government troops escorting a train of supplies and the rebels on the road between Puerto del Padre and Las Tunas, say the insurgents attacked the Spaniards and endeavoured to capture the train, but were defeated and unsuccessful. Rains are incessant in the interior, and vomito is spreading.

Recently Mabel Grey gave a dinner at St. James's Hall. Seventy tickets were issued at £10 a head. They sold rapidly at a premium among the husbands, brothers, and sons of respectable women. "Every club in London," says one who was there, "was represented. The feast was worthy of Lucullus; Mabel outdid herself." Men go to churches and listen to denunciations of crime, they subscribe for Magdalene asylums, and hear the Sinaitic commandment, "Non Moechgebris, repeated in fashionable and elegant language by accomplished preachers—but then they dine with Mabel Grey at £10 a head.—London letter.
