Money to Move the Crops

(National Crop Improvement Service.)

"Every year we see in financial news that the bankers are conserving money to move the crops.

"'How does the farmer get his money?' He has been carrying all of the risk and the sum total of this risk by all the farmers makes the risk carried by speculators fade into insignificance," says Mr. R. S. Rider, president, Canadian Steel & Wire Co.

"The farmer has always resented a fixed price because he considers that his wheat may be worth more than that at any time when he wants the full value for his property, but really the fixed price has very little to do with the selling price because at no time during the war period did wheat sell below the guarantee.

"Farmers have always said that if the middleman could be eliminated that they could get more for the wheat and the public could buy it for less.

"The Wheat Growers Association has demonstrated its ability to market its wheat co-operatively and it has not been difficult to finance every wheat transaction when placed upon a business basis."

The Cow a Food Laboratory

(National Crop Improvement Service.)

How can we build a new breed of men without we start with the babies? It is impossible to improve our race unless we nourish our infants that they may develop both physically and mentally.

The dairy cow is at the foundation of every industry. She is a most wonderful laboratory. She fills her stomach hopper with grain, grass and silage, then she lies down and by chewing her cud, converts this raw material into the most perfect food in the world.

Doctor McCallom, of Johns Hopkins University, tells us that the "water soluble A" and the "fat soluble B," two mysterious somethings, are found in milk as nowhere else. Without these mysterious vitamines children will not grow, so milk-fed babies have the greatest possible advantage over the wolf-reared children raised without milk to drink.

How are the slum babies fed? Black coffee, pickles, imitation jams and molasses on their bread, constitute the daily rations of thousands of our poor families in the cities.

Without milk children languish, the vigor of the adult declines and the vitality of the human race runs low.

Bread from Stones

(National Crop Improvement Service.)

Uncle Henry Wallace, father of the American Secretary of Agriculture, used to say that you cannot expect to remove fertility year after year from the soil without renewing it any more than you could keep on drawing money out of the bank without making a deposit. He used to rage up and down the land denouncing the man who mined his soil and called it farming.

The late Cyril G. Hopkins, of the University of Illinois, belonged to the same school and single-handed he crusaded against soil robbery by advocating building up of a permanent soil fertility by the use of rock phosphate.

He demonstrated on three hundred acres of very poor land in Southern Illinois, that he could by using manure, limestone and rock phosphate, produce 35½ bushels of wheat per acre, whereas on his check plots, where farm manure alone was used, he got but 11½ bushels.

He taught that our nitrogen supply can be taken from the air and that we generally have enough potash, but that we must replenish the phosphates.

The time will come when Canadian land must be renewed and while our farmers, especially in the West, have never used artificial fertilizers, it must be apparent that the economical time to restore fertility is before the soil is exhausted.

Funny Men at Shelburne

From the Economist

In these days when excitement runs somewhat high about auto bandits and such like, it isn't funny to try to "take a rise" out of people by acting in a way calculated to make them think you are of the bunch of bad men who are popularly supposed to be at large. And it may easily be dangerous, for nervous people are quite liable to make use of firearms if they have any.

Some young men who were endeavoring to be funny with a 4th line, Melancthon, farmer one night last week by trying to get him out of the house by a yarn that he had a cow stuck in the wire fence behind his barn (when he had no wire fence behind the barn), may be thankful that the shotgun that was fired was not pointed directly at them.

The three young fellows who were flying around in an old car without lights or license number, whirling around on other cars on the road as though to stop them, perhaps don't yet realize how close they were to being peppered from a car, the occupants of which only had a couple of rifles and a shotgun.

This sort of monkey business has nothing that can be said in its favor at any time. But it is plumb idiocy at a time when the public has a more or less justifiable attack of nerves.

And, by the way, it is high time the authorities strictly enforced the law as to automobiles having proper front and rear lights and proper license plates on front and rear.
