FARMERS' REQUIREMENTS

THE business and banking requirements of farmers are many and various. This Bank, because of its close contact with farmers, has learned through practical experience how to serve them in a definite and satisfactory manner.

It has co-operated with them when they had to purchase land, seed, stock, and implements and has helped them to save and to maintain their finances in an orderly manner. Our branch manager will be pleased to have you consult with him.

Cemeteries Carefully Tended

Dr. Ern Armstron Writes About His Tour Overseas—Construction of Ypres Goes Steadily On

Cobalt, Oct 27, 1922

Dear Mr. Thurston:

Owing to such desperate fires since arriving home I have not been able to write sooner. Mrs. Armstrong and I were much impressed with the active interest of the War Graves Commission in carrying out the plans for the cemeteries. While the cemetery in which Arnold is buried is not completed, it is in perfect order and men are working on it all the time.

I think the same plan is being carried out for each cemetery—a board walk stretching from one end to the other, at the head of which is the tall white marble cross, at the foot, a marble arch on which is placed a tablet containing the names of the men buried there. In the centre of the walk is the beautiful snap shots I took of Arnold's grave on altar, also of white marble. On either side of the walk are the simple, white marble slabs — row on row — which replace the temporary wooden ones. Flowers are planted on every grave, and they and the grass are kept in splendid order. In the completed cemeteries which we visited the shrubbery planted all around the outside was already looking very fine. We were informed that persons wishing to have the original wooden cross might do so on application to the "War Graves Commission, Baker St., London, Eng."

We found Ypres fairly humming with the work of re-building and already about half of the town is re built. Of course none of the larger building have been touched as yet.

Many of the land marks familiar to our Canadian boys are gone. About two-thirds of the country is back into grain. There are still the grim monuments of war—tremendous stock of barb wire all over the country, and live ammunition and explosives are still bing hauled off to points where ordnance experts are employed to destroy it. Tanks are seen strewn across the country and tremendous numbers of concrete gun emplacements still form a grim reminder of the German defences against which our boys struggled so valiantly.

Old Europe is still pulling itself together. England is making splendid progress and altogether they are in a hopeful mood.

While we had a most enjoyable trip, yet we are exceedingly glad to get back to Canada, and particularly to our family and friends. Kindest regards, —Ern. Armstrong.

We are indebted to Mr. Armstrong of Cobalt, who is an old Flesherton boy, for the above description of the work being done in the soldier cemeteries in France, in which most of our readers are deeply interested. Dr. and Mrs. Armstrong toured the battlefields of France and Flanders the past summer and previous to the trip we asked Col. Armstrong to give us an article on conditions in Europe as he found them, to which he kindly consented. Touring the battlefield was going over old familiar ground to Col. Armstrong, as he recruited and took overseas the 159th Batt. from Cobalt.—[ED. ADVANCE]

Fruit Growers Organize In Clarksburg District

Co-Operative Fruit Growers' Company Has Been Formed

It is very gratifying to learn that a Co Operative Fruit Growers' Company in the Clarksburg District has been formed. This Company is affiliated with the Niagara Peninsula Growers' Ltd. While only a small percentage of Fruit Growers have as yet joined, the number applying next year will assuredly increase. Reports of sales at exceptionally good prices have stimulated considerable interest.

The plan adopted is similar to the California Citrus Growers' Organization. It is the affiliation of all local Citrus Growers' Clubs into one great organization which does all the selling. By so doing, the business is so great that they can keep all markets supplied with only such quantities that will meet with ready sale. There will not be a glut on one market and famine on another. This uniform delivery means more stable prices for the consumer and less flucuation for the producer. We hope for the day when the California Citrus Growers' Co-Operative Organization will be duplicated in Ontario Fruit Selling Agencies.

BEDDING FOR STABLES

Straw, Peat Moss, Sawdust and Shavings Considered.

Straw Preferred for Many Reasons —Measuring Hay In the Mow and In the Stack — Hand-feeding Lambs—Farm Trespassers Scored.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The materials used for bedding domestic animals are generally straw from the grain fields, peat moss from the swamp, or shavings from the saw or planing mill. Straw is used to a greater extent than any other material, first because of its abundance; secondly because the stable offers a medium for transferring this by-product of the field to manure, and thereby facilitating its return to the land; thirdly because it is a good absorbent of liquids. Straws from oats, peas, rye, wheat and oats vary in value as a litter or bedding material. The hard rye and wheat straws, while durable to the wear of animals, is not as good an absorbent as the softer oat, barley and pea straws. Wheat straw not being highly valued as a feed finds its greatest use as a stable bedding. The nitrogen, potash and phosphorus contained in a ton of wheat or rye straw has a value at commercial fertilizer prices of $2.25, oat straw $2.60, and barley straw $2.10. Straws have a further value in that the organic matter content is large, and of such a nature as to be particularly valuable in soil improvement. Peat moss is valuable as an absorbent of liquids, it is also valuable for its nitrogen content. The manure from stables where peat moss is used as bedding is generally of considerably higher value than the manure from any other source. It has one objection in that it is not as clean as straw. Sawdust and shavings, while serving the purpose as a litter or bedding material, add little value to the manure. Useful as an aid in keeping the animals clean and preventing the loss of the liquid portion of the manure, sawdust or shavings serve a good purpose; but it must be remembered that the fertility value of sawdust is low. Those who have straw should use it. Those who have neither straw or peat moss should then use the sawdust or shavings.—L. Stevenson, Sec., Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

Mustard, cress, radish, lettuce, set onions and spinach are crops that can be grown in a hotbed.

Be sure that the snow is well tramped about the apple and plum trees. This will discourage mice from nesting near them.

Progressive Leadership

Mr. A. S. Thurston, editor of the Meaford Mirror, who was recently on the staff of the Farmers' Sun, has the following article under the above caption:

A change in the leadership of the Agrarians at Ottawa is inevitable. Hon. T. A. Crerar cannot continue much longer as a leader, and a successor must be chosen.

In our opinion, and we have been fairly in a position to form one, Hon. T. A. Crerar has never been a real leader at Ottawa. He has never led. Coming into politics by the side door, he was given a portfolio in the Union government and elected as a unionist, thus sorely grieving many of his U.F.O. friends in Ontario for his "betrayal." This grievance was not exposed to the public gaze, but was none the less real.

Since the U.F.O. entered Federal politics, he has been the "leader" of the party but has never fired its enthusiasm. His hold on the position has been due to two things—his ability for getting along without getting into trouble (due to his ability to hold his tongue when important things are clamoring to be uttered) and the difficulty of choosing another outstanding man who would be acceptable to the whole group.

As Minister of Agriculture, his record is not one of aggressive development, and as leader of the Progressive party in the House he has not been able to persuade his followers to act in concert on any important matter. They all like him, for he is a most likeable man and a man of exceptional business ability, but they have not found in him the guiding genius who would inspire their loyalty and dictate their judgments.

A recent regrettable bereavement in his family, and the insistance of his company that he devote more of his time to its affairs, have forced the issue and the time is not far distant when the United Farmers of Canada will have to genuinely unite and choose a leader to direct the political future of the new movement.

We cannot place much credence in the newspaper talk that it will be a case of resigning from his company or from the leadership. Despite the large salary and his political ventures, our belief is that he is a comparatively poor man and must retain the profitable business position that has given him scope to develop his powers in such a wonderful way. In short, we believe he cannot afford to give up his business for the sake of leading a group in the House that refuses to be led.
