From Our Own Correspondent

With regret we have to report the sudden and unexpected death of Mr. J. M. Thurston, who passed away at an early hour on Thursday morning after a short illness of about two days. On Tuesday last Mr. Thurston, apparently in his usual health, went up the valley to his bush to make preparation for taking out some wood. On his return home, however, he became very sick as if his stomach was deranged. Medical aid was summoned, but his condition became one of anxiety until Wednesday evening when he rested easier. Shortly after midnight he called for some light nourishment and while this was being brought a sudden change came over him; and hurrying to his bedside his wife found him breathing his last.

Deceased was one of the early pioneers of Euphrasia, and in his early days lived on a farm about two miles north of this place, but later moved into the village where he has kept a boarding house. He was an active member of the Methodist church, and for over forty years has been ever ready to do his part whether in preaching, exhorting, or admonishing. As a strong advocate of the cause of temperance he has fought manfully against the liquor traffic, while in acts of kindness and sympathy he has shown himself equally zealous.

The funeral, which was well attended, took place on Sunday under the auspices of the Orange order. The remains were taken to the church, where a funeral address was given by the Rev. T. R. White from Revelations 14 : 13. Opportunity was also given for a few words from friends or acquaintances, and some who had known the deceased longest, gave short addresses. After the service the funeral proceeded to Flesherton cemetery, where the body was laid away to await the resurrection morn. The sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved ones.

A very unfortunate accident befel the youngest little boy of Mr. J. R. Stafford on Thursday. While standing on his high chair trying to get some little playthings, he fell back on the floor in such a manner as to break his arm above the elbow and also dislocate it. Since it was set he is doing as well as could be expected.

Mr. J. Carruthers and Henry Wallace have arrived home after spending some months in Algoma.

Mr. R. D. Carruthers is to be appointed census commissioner for East Grey.

In the Queen's Memory

The memorial service held in the Presbyterian church on Saturday afternoon was largely attended, the church being well filled. The opening services were conducted by the three pastors of the town, Revs. Ward, Thom and Lamont; the choir sang "Rock of Ages," after which Matthew Richardson, M.P., was called upon to speak. Mr. Richardson's address was not by any means a repetition of what he had said on former occasions. He began by referring to the wonderful pageant being witness in England that day—a procession extending two or three miles, in which sixty princes of the blood followed on foot, and there were representatives from every court in Europe. He had only once had a passing glimpse of the Queen some forty years ago. Looking at the cause of the sincere regret at our Queen's death he said it was not because of her beautiful person or personality; it was from within; it was the noble spirit of the woman. When she came to the throne monarchy was in disrepute, but it had pleased God to give her a good mother who guided and directed her young mind. She had come to a court not noted for purity, but she had sought from on high the strength which she needed to combat evil. The speaker then referred to the great advances made during the Victorian era, specifying the discovery of matches, development of steam, electrical appliances, photography, aggregation of territory and wealth of commerce. The Queen's influence for good had touched every court in the land. Her's was the ideal constitutional government of the world. The late Czar of Russia had said that the Queen of England was the greatest statesman the world had to-day. Her opinions were respected and accepted, more particularly of late years. Her reign tended to peace. Had she her will there would have been no Crimean war, and had her opinions been respected Britain would have gained thereby. Nothing had been gained by that war, but thousands of lives had been lost. The Queen held that war was only to be sanctioned on one ground—the protection of justice, liberty and truth. But she is gone, and homage is being paid throughout the distant islands of the sea. This was not homage to her gifts or her person, but to the goodness of the woman. It was only when we looked into her private life that this was made clear, it was to the goodness of the woman, the model mother, the sympathetic soul. Mr. Richardson said much more of interest, and ended by quoting Tennyson's lines which we printed two weeks ago, which he said was a grand tribute by a grand man to the noblest queen that ever sat upon a throne.

The choir rendered very feelingly Tennyson's beautiful lines, "Crossing the Bar."

Dr. Christee was the next speaker. He quoted the Queen of Sheba's words when she paid her visit to Solomon and thought they were applicable in this case. Although so much has been written on the subject yet the half had not been told. He believed she had been raised up by Almighty God to fill the position, and mentioned her good works in visiting hospitals, providing for the sick, and sympathy with suffering. She was a patriarch among her people. To convey an idea of the cosmopolitan nature of the mourning he mentioned that four Irish fishwives had sent a wreath in the form of a harp, a woman in a poor house had sent another, and the president of the United States had sent the grandest wreath of all. After all had been said the half had not been told. Last Monday the King had stood at the foot of the bier after all but the undertaker had departed, and after gazing at the features of his mother for some time he said: "There: close it down forever, never to be opened until judgment morn."

Rev. Mr. Thom thanked the speakers and added a few words, after which the impressive meeting came to a close by singing "God save the King" and the doxology.

A load of our young people went to Zion the other night to hear Mr. Goff lecture on the use of tobacco.

An Owen Sound Boy Killed.

News has been received that Sergt.-Major Dayton Brown Hammond of Owen Sound was killed in a skirmish last week. Serg. Hammond was a member of No 1 Co 31st Regiment, and was a graduate of the London Infantry School. When the second contingent was organized he enlisted at Toronto in C Battery, and was one the Canadians who took part in the relief of Mafeking. Though he enlisted as driver his abilites were soon recognized, and at his death he held the position of Sergt.-Major. He was a modest, retiring young man, and in order to avoid a public farewell slipped quietly away at the time of his enlistment. He was about twenty-three years of age and among his companions and messmates of the 31st. Regiment was generally popular. In a recent letter to his mother, dated about the time of his departure for home of the second contingent he announced his enlistment in "Gat" Howards's Scouts, with the remark that "he had not yet had enough soldiering, and was determined to see the business to a finish. The young man was a member of Court Pride of Grey, A.O.F. and was insured in that lodge for $1,000. Since his departure his fellow-members have kept his insurance paid up. The town also had a policy of $1,000 on his life and only last Monday night renewed it.

County Council

At the concluding sessions of the County council last week a resolution of condolence of the Queen was presented and passed.

The claim of Arnold Bros. for damages to a horse from falling through a defective bridge was threshed out and the matter finally left in the hands of the council solicitor for settlement.

The Council decided to act in conjunction with the County of Bruce in building a bridge on the county line over the Saugeen river near Hanover, at a cost of abot $5000.

The Owen Sound Collegiate Institute and Meaford high school trustees will be asked to furnish statements of what constitues their requirements for extra maintenance.

A request from Mr. McKnight for some improvements at the registry office was granted. It was also resolved that a new floor be laid in the jail kitchen; that repairs be made to the eavestroughing on on the court house and a new roof put on the back verandah; new flooring in halls and corridors; that flowering plants, not to exceed in cost $7, be planted in the court house grounds; that communication of Mr. John Armstrong, on behalf of the Law Association, asking for changes in the law chambers, be laid over until June.

An interesting discussion was introduced by Mr Harness of Derby at the meeting on Saturday. Mr. Harness wants the County Council Act amended so that the members of the Council will be composed of the reeves of the municipalities, on the ground of economy and the fact that the reeves are better acquainted with municipal affairs than any one else.

Mr. Gordon approved of the idea, but pointed out that the towns would have no representatives, as they had no reeves.

After some further discussion Mr. Harness gave notice of motion.

A discussion also took place on the question of holding the June sesion at Markdale, and it was finally decided to meet there on June 17.

A vote of thanks to town council for the use of the chamber and a grant of $2 to the caretaker closed the session.
