A Letter from Hawkesbury.

Hawkesbury, Ont. May, 25, 1901

DEAR EDITOR:—As I sit at my window the pom, pom, pom, pom of the engines, the hum of many machines, and slash, slash of cross cut circular saws come to me across the night air. These things, with the gleam of electric lights, the occasional tint of sulphurous acid, and the ascending columns from smoke stacks and steam escapes tell me that hundreds of rolls of pulp are being made ready for markets at home and abroad.

At one time I held the idea that pulp ready for market was nothing more nor less than finely ground wood, bleached, dried, and shipped in bulk. Now I know that in appearance it is much like coarse paper.

The Riordon Mill, situated here, is among the largest of pulp mills, and when the proposed plan of placing additional digesters has been carried out, it will hold its own with any. Perhaps if I were to tell you of the amount of fuel used you might form some idea of the power utilized.

During the day hours about seventy loads of sawdust, each weighing with the wagon nearly five tons, are taken from the Hawkesbury Lumber Co.'s sawmill to the Riordon Pulp Works. During the night hours also, the wagons are constantly running, but probably fewer loads are taken. As a mild estimate let us say three tons per load and 110 loads a day, giving a total of 330 tons every twenty-four hours. But that is not all. Two immense scows bring sawdust from Calumet. Then, too, logs are brought from the forest for fuel and all the refuse spruce goes to the furnaces. Besides this, much coal is burned, especially during the four or five months during which the sawmill is not running.

Regarding the sawmill a few words may not be out of place. By examining the above figures you will see that it must produce every second during the day at least twelve pounds of pure sawdust for the pulpmill. The mill is really a combination of four, each being complete in itself. As nearly all your readers have visited the mills at Collingwood, Parry Sound, or other Georgian Bay towns, I need not speak of the band, gang and circular saws, the live rollers, lath mills, etc., etc. The employes number from 600 to 1000 and 100 horses are kept at work in the yards.

But let us leave the swish, swish of machinery, and direct our attention to the natural boundary between the two Canadas, Upper and Lower. Parkman's story of Adam Doulac has made the Long Sault (rapids) famous for all time. Just opposite the town of Hawkesbury the peaceful Ottawa falls into "The Cellars," then rushes out in foam-crested waves; and roaring, seething, and plunging down a boulder strewn slope of seven miles. Occasionally the Long Sault has a passenger. Two weeks ago a sailing yacht became unmanageable and was abandoned at the head of the rapids. Again, last week, several rafts of square timber were piloted down the incline. The Ottawa is spanned, a short distance below the head of the Sault, by the Great Northern bridge which was built last year. This structure is over half a mile long and is one of the finest in Ontario.

Across the river from Hawkesbury is the town of Grenville, and skirting the shore for several miles on that side is the Grenville canal. Alongside the canal is a most beautiful drive.

From Grenville to Carillion on the Quebec side is a curio in the form of an old wide-guage railway—said to be the widest on the continent. The road is about ten inches wider than the standard guage The engines used on this road are of an ancient type—using wood for fuel. This road has several names, the most popular being "The—get—out—an—push—line"

Possibly in another letter a description of the manufacture of pulp as seen here may not be uninteresting—but enough for this time.

Sincerely yours,
F. L. SINE

The following article is taken from the Waterloo Chronicle Telegraph:—"A striking example of Yankee ingenuity is given by Rev. Bryon H. Stauffer, a Methodist minister preaching in one of the largest churches in this city, says a Buffalo exchange. Mr. Stauffer, by the way, is a Canadian, and was born in Wilmot Township, within fifteen miles of Stratford, about thirty-five years ago. He is consequently well known in this neighborhood. Rev. Mr. Stauffer is what is called a great drawing card. His church is always filled; but he has a novel way of keeping his flock together. He has cards printed with numbers, like on a milkman's ticket. He sends these out to people in the district in which this church is situated, with directions how to use etc. The ticket holder presents the card at the door of the church at Sunday services. There is a man with a ticket punch. He punches the tickets once for every service. At the end of the year if the ticket holder has forty punches in his ticket he is entitled to go on the pastor's annual excursion free. Rev. Mr. Stauffer was a reporter on the St. Louis Chronicle for years. He made a big success of it He was called the best railway reporter in the country. He became an alderman of the city. Then he got what he designates a call to preach the gospel. The Chronicle people offered him a raise of $500 a year to stay but he couldn't. He went to Holland, N. Y. There he made the divekeepers and saloon men know he was around by the way he went for vice in all its forms. His fame spread and he got a call to Buffalo. Now he is said to be in the best paid pulpit in the place. He has often been heard of. He is called Buffalo's Parkhurst.

The Heavens Wept.

Contrary to all precedent the 24th of May this year was one of depression instead of joy. It was the first anniversary of the birth of our late beloved queen after her demise, and as such the elements conspired to make it a day of mourning rather than one of pleasure. Perhaps this was more fitting, but it proved a great disappointment to many thousands of people throughout the breadth of this dominion who desired to make it a day of recreation. Many surrounding towns had gone to large expense in order to fittingly celebrate the day and all are up against a heavy financial deficit. Among these perhaps Markdale came out better than the most. Although the town had entered into heavy financial obligations, a drama put on in Marsh's hall in the evening proved a remarkable financial success and thus very much relieved the committee. We understand the receipts of this entertainment amounted to about $125. In Flesherton the citizens put in the day quietly at their own homes, with the exception of two or three enthusiastic disciples of Isaac Walton, who braved the elements with their fishpoles and say the fish bit well. They certainly earned all the fish they caught as it rained unceasingly all day from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

The Late Jacob Sloan

The late Jacob B. Sloan, whose death we announced last week, was born in New York state 74 years ago, and removed when a young man to Cornwall, Ont. In 1847 he married a Miss Margaret Heath of York township, who survives him In 1856 Mr. and Mrs. Sloan came to Artemesia township and took up their residence on lot 37 on the 10th con. where they lived for eight years and then moved to Eugenia, where they have been honored residents since 1864. Mr. Sloan was the owner of a sash, door and lath factory, and in recent years added a sawmill to the business which is at present operated by his son Walker. Three years ago last March Mr. Sloan met with a severe accident in his factory which was thought at the time would result fatally, but he recovered to a certain extent, although he has been an invalid ever since. This last winter grippe weakened an already weak constitution and on Wednesday morning of last week the spirit left its clay for a higher flight. Deceased was for forty years connected with the Methodist church, having acted as local preacher, class leader and an enthusiastic worker in the Sabbath school. The writer has known Mr. Sloan for 35 years and has always heard his name used as a synonym for honor and integrity. For many years he has held the post of tax collector for the township and his last duties in this connection were performed this past season. His family consisted of seven children—five sons and two daughters—of whom two sons and one daughter are living, and four are dead. The living children are William of Kimberley, Mrs. H. Meldrum of Montana, and Walker, Eugenia. The funeral took place to Flesherton cemetery on May 24, and a special memorial service will be held in the Methodist church, Eugenia, on Sunday evening next, when an appropriate sermon will be delivered by the pastor, Rev. T. White.
