"Have you ever noticed," says an observant hardware merchant in The Hardware Age, "how prosperous, as a general rule, church-going people are ? You may think that such people are dull. They may not be entertaining but it is surprising how the general average of religious people, no matter what denomination prosper in life. There are reasons for this. Church-going people have formed habits of living that make them very efficient workmen and they do not waste what they accumulate.

There are two mighty bad habits to get into. One is not paying your debts when you can. The other is running into debt. The latter causes more worry, suffering, headaches, and insanity and premature death than any cause. If you would carry on happily and successfully avoid debt and not have your creditors chasing you up. We know of homes that have been broken up because of running into debt.
