During the evening Miss McLean was presented with a costly and beautiful string of pearls. Ita Pedlar read a nicely worded address, while Della English made the presentation. Although taken by surprise, Miss McLean thanked her many friends for their kindness in a few well-chosen words. Miss McLean has spent two years in our midst and has made many friends here, who regret her departure from among us She was always faithful in her duties at school and also took an active part in the church here, where she will be greatly mssed. The Alcox Bros. put up some splendid music, which made things lively. Quite a crowd remained for the dance in the evening at the pavilion which was very much enjoyed by all the young people.

A VICIOUS YOUNGSTER

A Honeywood boy who must have a liking for destruction called at Nelson Lawrences home near there and finding no one at home commenced to cut things up, his first charge was on a flower bed which he completely destroyed, then a young tree fell before his onslaught. He then experimented with the size of a stone required to break a leaded glass light gaining access to the house he liberated a bowl of gold fish allowing them to amuse themselves on the floor. About this time Mr. Lawrence happened home and was so disgusted with what met his eyes that he laid information to P. C. Gardiner.

This boy should be severely punished but owing to his tender years will be given a chance, his guardian promising his better behavior. —Creemore Star.

AND THAT'S THAT

Here is a little straight-from-the-shoulder talk about matters lying near our heart. There seems to be a feeling among some business men that a newspaper has no business to make money. Why not? It is the most exciting business in the world, the most trying in every way. It means long hours and the greatest care in its conduct. The newspaper has the entire public to deal with. It is criticized on all occasions. It has to deal with all the cranks in the community,and to do this successfully requires judgment and patience. It has power, and that power to the credit of journalism, is nearly always wielded for the public good. No question of vital concern to the home people fails to find a strong support from the home newspaper, and this, too, without renumeration . The publisher spends his money to further these projects and the community never gives a thought to the matter of cost to him. It is not paid out of the public pocket. Every town needs a good newspaper, and the way to have it is to assist in making the business profitable. The newspaper wants every concern to prosper. Why should not this good-will be returned. To make a profit, to earn interest on the investment, the newspaper must have a living rate for its paper and advertising space.—Carleton Place Canadian.

A frame cottage owned by Henry Ternan of Arthur was struck by lightning and destroyed. The building was vacant.
