Advertising Not An Extra Cost

"In some minds the diea prevails that advertising is an extra cost added to the expense of the product. Were that theory right the whole scheme of advertising would vanish like mist before the blazing sun. Advertising would never have existed. If we build an expensive plant, installing proper machinery, and manufacture only 50 tires a day, what would be the cost of these tires? The price would be prohibitive. On the other hand if we create a demand that enables us to manufacture thousands of tires and tubes daily, we are then able to price those tires in direct inverse ratio to quantity. Advertising invariably lowers the cost of goods. if they are dependable goods."— Harvey S. Firestone.
