WIT AND HUMOR.

The Snake Season.

Snakes that many months had waited,
While in holes they hibernated,
Have been summoned by the thunder to appear;
From the nooks where they've been hiding
They will through the grass come gliding,
And a lot of startling tales we soon shall hear.

Every twig that now is breaking
Will set timid people quaking,
When they saunter through the woods on pleasure bent;
They will run in consternation,
And make earnest declaration
That they saw a rattler six feet in extent.

When a man in byways lagging
Feels a thistle's sudden jagging,
O'er his face a sickly pallor soon will spread;
He'll imagine fearful paining
And to helpers be explaining
He was bitten by a monstrous copperhead.

From the strictly rural regions,
Where the serpents swarm in legions—
That's according to the men who till the loam—
There will often come a story
Of a young man's hair turned hoary
By the fright when some great black snake chased him home.

Even out upon the ocean
There will often be commotion,
And the mariners will wildly break for shore,
And then later they'll be saying
That a sea-snake they saw playing
Was a half a mile in length, and maybe more.

But while others' yarns are spinning,
Thinking lances they are winning,
There is one who later on will scoop the stakes;
He's the West Virginia liar,
Famous as a record breaker,
And he always makes a specialty of snakes.

Chicago's Wolves.

The Chicago man explained that he had moved into the suburbs in order to keep the wolf from the door.

"Of course," he hastily added, observing our puzzled looks, "I refer to the figurative wolf more particularly."

The literal or actual wolves were in fact more plentiful in the suburbs than they were down town, but less plentiful by far than the New York newspapers would have one suppose.—Detroit Journal.

Fine Intentions.

"I am determined," said the man who is proud of his boy, "that this youngster shall acquire correct habits of speech."

"The best way to do that is to see that he has good examples."

"Of course. And that's what I'm going to do. I don't intend to let him say 'don't,' and I ain't going to tolerate the use of that vulgarism 'ain't.'"—Washington Star.

A Determination.

I've changed my intentions
The sister's charm
No longer will win me;
I'm ten in the farm.
I've lost previous moments—
I'm sure of it now—
A follerin politics
Still at the plow.

For talkin won't hitch up
The hosses, you know,
An spec he won't narrow
The soil, row by row.
The seasons is changing;
I'll quit it, I vow—
This follerin politics
'Stid of the plow.

First Class In Logic, Please Criticise.

"But how," asked the hard featured man who was looking at the pictures, "do you know this is an accurate likeness of Homer?"

"Do you know, sir, of anybody else it looks like?" demanded the artist.

"No."

"Then of course it's Homer."—Chicago Tribune.

No Good In His Case.

"They put a man in a hot oven to thaw the rheumatism out of him according to the recipe of the latest cure."

"That would never do in my case. I wouldn't be allowed to bake ten minutes before some death creditor would be fooling with the oven door!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Parting Compliments.

So reckless and wild was he,
The king of the oyster family,
Obnoxious he had no thirst for knowledge,
One day expelled the young man from the college.

He hoped, as he rode away,
A neighboring donkey's duty bray.
"'Tis the mournful goodby," he said, "of my class.
And the valedictorian, of course, is an ass."

Truly Rural.

A truly rural lover, with a truly rural cot,
Wooed a truly rural maiden all the May;
Said the truly rural lover, "Truly rural is our lot;
Let us marry in a truly rural way!"

So a truly rural wedding and a truly rural feast
Made two more truly rurals truly one;
For naught not truly rural truly cared they in the east
Oh, to truer truly rurals there are none!

A Good Reason.

"What did you have your gear altered from 60 to 90 for?"

"Because pa's is 60 and Jack's is 90."

"Oh!"—Puck-Me-Up.

THE ARIZONA KICKER.

Some Interesting Items From a Lively Center of Civilization.

A bullet fired by Mr. John Scott at a dog two weeks ago struck a knot in a fence and rebounded and raked the shooter across the scalp. He yesterday informed us that since the accident he had not been troubled with dandruff in the slightest. He thinks the discovery worthy of public notice. We have heard that hitting a man over the head with a gun produces the same genial effect.

On Monday last the editor of the Lone Jack Recorder was taken by the nose and led out of his office and kicked into the brush by a man only five feet high. We have no comment to make. This is a country of surprises.

Last Sunday Coroner Filkins spent two hours holding an inquest on the skull of a bear which had been picked up about five miles from town, and it took the testimony of a dozen old hunters to convince him that he hadn't got hold of a great murder mystery. The emptiness of the skull probably excited a fraternal feeling in the breast of the official.

The attempt of ex-Judge Singletree to introduce the game of golf to our people last Thursday was not a success from his standpoint. After one or two efforts most of the players threw away their sticks and began shooting the balls from hole to hole, and when the judge had protested in vain he gave the matter up in despair. We are one of those who can't see why you should whack a ball with a club when you can drive it with a bullet.

This town could get a water supply of 500 gallons per day from Beaver creek by expending the sum of $500, but at the public meeting held Tuesday evening the project was sat down on with a smash. We fathered the project, but we are not greatly disappointed. We own a duck pond 60 by 100 feet in dimensions, and we can paddle about in it without reference to the public supply.—M. QUAD.

PRESERVING THE PEACE.

The Policeman Was Called Just In the Nick of Time.

The woman rushed up to the policeman enjoying his quiet cam digestate on the street corner.

"Say," she exclaimed impulsively, as women sometimes do, "I want you to come around to our house quick."

"What's the matter?" inquired the policeman, with provoking imperturbability.

"It's my husband."

"What is he doing?"

"He's drunk again."

"Well, what is he doing? Smashing the furniture?"

She looked at the guardian of the peace scornfully.

"No, he ain't," she said.

"Has he swung an ax?"

"Of course not."

"Nor pulled a gun?"

"No."

"Is he chewing the rag?"

"No, he isn't."

The woman was getting more nervous every minute.

"Is he creating a disturbance?" asked the policeman.

"No; he's just sitting there in the kitchen."

"Is he doing any harm?"

"He dasn't."

"Then what do you want me to go there for?"

"To arrest him."

"What for?"

"To preserve the peace."

"But you say he isn't disturbing it."

"He ain't," she snapped, with a thrust of her jaw forward, "but if he sets around that kitchen much longer in my way I'll be disturbing it, and when I get through with him, Mr. Policeman, you'll have to come after him with an ambulance. Do you understand?"—Washington Star.

How He Rose.

The old man was reminiscent.

"I recall that as boys there was always an intense rivalry between White and Brown," he said. "White had all the advantage of being a rich man's son, but Brown made a solemn vow that he would rise to a greater height in the world than White ever could."

"And did he keep his vow?" they asked curiously.

"Did he?" exclaimed the old man. "Did he! Well, I should rather think he did. Why, he became a professional aeronaut."—Chicago Post.

The Billville Banner.

The rain ceased on Wednesday last, and we have been peacefully plowing under a hot May sun ever since.

Seventeen candidates were in our midst yesterday. While here they enjoyed themselves by digging a 60 foot well for us.

The next world is so close to us that if we go on a hilltop we can almost feel our clothes scorching.

We have about decided to enter the political race, as one of the candidates is too bowlegged to run fast.—Atlanta Constitution.

He Got Out of It.

"Mr. Grouch," said the toastmaster, "will now respond to the toast 'The Ladies.'"

The savage bachelor arose, pale and determined.

"The ladies," said he. "The ladies—God bless them nevertheless."—Indianapolis Press.

Crowded Out.

"Wat's de matter, Weary?"

"It's de blues, Dusty. I'm worryin myself half sick over de idee dat long afore I've been dead ten years dat New York Hall of Fame may be chock full!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Notes From Busy Bath.

Bath, July 4.—Mrs. Ferguson, Winnipeg, arrived on Friday on a visit to her mother, Mrs. Thomas Armstrong. The younger Collingham talked here on Saturday night on her way to Rochester with an excursion, but owing to an accident to her sleeping coat had to return to Kingston. Our village was almost deserted on Monday, so many having gone to the cities to Natsmer. George Collins and wife have returned to their home in Rochester, N.Y. Miss Carrie Myers went to Rochester on the steamer North King on Sunday. Miss Lillie Johnson, teacher at Reidville, has returned home for the holidays. Howard Kennedy, teacher at Amherst Island, has returned for the holidays. Miss Alice McCaughtry, who teaches at Wolfe Island, has also returned. Frank Keller, attending Kingston business college, has returned. We notice by the Kingston papers that he has obtained a diploma. William Ram, principal of the Catarauqui school, has returned home. John Ram, Wolfe Island, was here on Sunday on a short visit to his parents. Miss Turcotte, Kingston, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Alexander Darragh. The Misses Brown, with their families and servants, arrived on Friday, and have moved into their "Bay View Villa," which, owing to the extensive improvements they have done, makes the place look very attractive. Quite a number of Americans are beginning to settle with us for the summer at Mr. Edwards' summer resort. John Armstrong's face wears a smile this week. A bouncing baby boy arrived at his house on Monday. Mrs. Reeder has been removed to the Kingston hospital.

Almost A Century Old.

Ernestown Station, July 2.—Ernestown furnished its regular quota of horses to the Napanee races to-day. R. Soon, Kingston, has taken a great many orders for this locality for the Fleetwood spring suits. Mr. and Mrs. W. Hogle have returned from visiting friends in Stanley at Lyn and points east in Montreal. Mr. Hogle is much improved by the trip. Alex. Jones is recovering and improving. Dr. Ingle and family left on Monday for their new home in Napanee. Mr. Ingle has had a very large practice here and will be much missed. Mr. Wagner, who is spending a few weeks here, Mr. Bibby, of Toronto, is here on a visit to his father, Mr. Robert Bibby, who is failing very fast. He was accompanied by his wife and child. A number of our young people took advantage of one rate to Niagara Falls and Lyn, and report a very pleasant time. Thos. Bibby, who has been for some time in the Rockies, is home for a few days, with his mother, who is very ill. Mrs. Thomas Harrison, of Lyn, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Bibby, with her mother, who is quite ill. Mr. Morrison, Lyn, visited friends here on Sunday. Mrs. Ed. Bibby, who
