Report of S. S. Convencion.

The second Annual Convention of Artemesia Township Sabbath School Association was held in the Methodist church at Vandeleur, October 8, 1901. The afternoon sesssion commenced at 2.30. Rev. L. W. Thom, president, was in the chair. The opening devotional exercises were conducten by the pastor, Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, B. D.

Mr. J. A. Hutchinson of Portlaw gave a very carefully prepared paper on "How to secure faithful attendance of teachers and scholars." He claimed that every enthusiastic and devoted teacher would have a lofty aim in his work, and possessing this would not fail to see great opportunity for usefulness in the Sabbath school work. A true estimate of the importance of the work would secure a faithful attendance of teachers. To secure attendance of younger scholars stimulate the mental faculties by the use of object studies. Encourage in the child the "wonder spirit." Teach the lesson as a series and give a foretaste of the next lesson each Sabbath.

Rev. F. W. Varley, M. A., addressed the convention on "The influence of the Home in the Sabbath school." He defined influence as a power proceeding from some subject to some object in such a way as to change that object. The influence of the home is far-reaching in relation to the school in childhood. Mental and moral character are largely moulded by the parents. As the home is so will be the child. Too often parents are unwilling to provide for the spiritual welfare of the child. They disregard the church and Sabbath school instead of bringing their children to such services. In this way by their example they could help the school.

Miss Christie and Rev. J.S I. Wilson, B.D., sang a a duet. Rev. James Buchanan, M. A., discussed "How to secure to our teachers the necessary training." He had once been a Methodist class leader and teacher. He pointed out that in the Wesleyan church in England that the parents marched with their children to Sabbath school and from the school entered with them into the service of worship. He suggested that each convention should secure the services of two thoroughly qualified instructors to give lessons in teaching to those present. This would require some money but it would be an excellent investment. Every teacher should secure Cruden's concordance, a Bible dictionary and the lesson helps of his own church. A bible with helps and a revised bible are also necessary. The lesson picture roll and a map of Palestine, with a map of the travels of St. Paul, should be found in every school room. In a Bible class for teachers the leader should blend: (1) a neccessary instruction; (2) the necessary method of teaching; (3) make it a class as far as possible; (4) make the teaching an object lesson; (5) encourage questions.

Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, B.D., addressed the children, giving an object lesson. He pointed out and illustrated some of the "Traps" by which boys and girls are caught: (1) Bad thoughts; (2) bad temper; (3) bad company; (4) bad principle; (5) bad habits. He pointed out how these might be avoided and overcome.

At the opening of the evening session, Rev. L. W. Thom, retiring president, in a few well chosen remarks introduced the new President, the Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, B.D., to his office.

The subject, 'Childhood in relation to the Kingdom," was dealt with by Rev. J. A. Matheson, B. D., of Priceville. He showed that Christianity alone among religions cared for the children. The interests of childhood commands an intense and prolonged effort on their behalf. The young must fill up the ranks of church workers They are susceptible to good and evil influences and hence the importance of surrounding them with helpful influences. The lessons of youth are never forgotten. The training of youth plus the grace of God produce a good life. He enforced Christ's injunction, "Feed my lambs."

Rev. J Hunter of Markdale addressed the convention on "The influence of Sabbath school in guarding the morals of youth." He claimed that the Sunday school is the most important institution of the church. Parents are anxious about the morals of their children. In our age the youth are early in the midst of business and pleasure and so should have fixed principles of morals inculcated very soon. Any institution fostering the morals of childhood should be encouraged. Look to the moral tone of the teachers and the fruits produced in the Sabbath school. Temperance and integrity are essential as they go into the walks of life. The morals taught should have the breath of the gospel in then. Preoccupy the minds of youth with the word of God,

Mr. Pickell of Markdale gave an address on "How to keep Young Men in the Sabbath School." Mr. Pickell had been delighted with the progress of the convention and urged that such gatherings be given more thought. He regretted that so many ministers were not permitted to attend the schools. He thought the church should make some provision in this matter. There was no difficulty in keeping children in the school. If young men are to be held something must be done to interest and instruct them. Teachers require training. While teachers are often untrained, he did not think their teaching a failure, for with a spirit of love for souls and devotion to their work they will accomplish much in spite of difficulties The Sabbath school should be made attractive.

During the evening programme Miss Steele, of Alton, and Misses Joy, of Flesherton, sang to the delight of all present.

Rev. James Buchanan of Dundalk in his unique and able way handled the question drawer. The friends of Vandeleur received the thanks of the convention for the excellent tea provided and the hospitable manner in which they entertained the association. Mr. F. Nicholson was appointed delegate to the Provincial association. The association will meet next year in Priceville. The following officers were elected:—Pres., Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, B.D.; Vice, Mr. Wm, Buchanan; Sec., Rev. T. R. White; Treas., Mr. A. Wilson; Committee, Messrs. C. C. James, John Cunningham, Jeremiah Thompson.

Stones Settlement.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Mr. Editor, news in this section has been scarce the last two weeks or more. Visitors have not come or gone as in the days of yore; there's been no deaths or marriages so far as we have heard, and I am very glad to say no accidents have occurred, but the weather's been so very bad folks had to don their gaiters, and farmers as a general rule could not dig up their taters; but some has 'em up and in, as they thought it would be better to dig a few when they got a chance, for fear it might be wetter: but still there's lots left yet undug, but then, some folks would rather let 'em lie an rot than dig 'em in such weather. Mr. Stone's at his new house as busy as a bee, and Mr. Boyce is helping him, and plainly could we see their noses red, their faces blue, their toes and fingers tingle, as they hammered away on that very cold day, striving the house to shingle. Pearley Stone has been from home a few days on a visit, to her grandmama at Flesherton, Mrs Peter Holman,—is it? Mr. Wood, our pedagogue, (who's not a man to flatter) moved to the house that's on the farm belonging to McPhatter. He moved a week or two ago, and brought with him Mrs. Wood, and we most heartily welcome them to this here neighborhood. Neighbor Hazard lost a cow and thought she'd gone to stay; a week ago he brought her back—had found her miles away. His brother Jervis, young and strong, and not a bit consumptive, has moved on to the farm to which he is the her presumptive. Mrs. —says she to me, it seems a curious caper, that I should pay my dollar in, and somebody else take out my paper. By the by, I nigh forgot having heard the other night, that Mr. Alexander Neilson was visiting Mr. Wright. Mrs. Neilson she's there to, and so is Mrs. Hynds, they are sisters of Mrs. Wright. Blest be the tie that binds. Reader, just one word before I quit, I hope you will not fail, to remember that on Friday next is Tom McArthur's sale.
