There were more pretty good cattle and fewer lean ones on the market to-day than has been the case for several weeks past, and although the wet muggy weather is unfavorable for keeping meat, yet the butchers turned out strong and trade was fair all round with prices about the same as our last week's markets, but some of the cattle to-day were of better quality than has been offered here for some time past. G. Martel paid 5¼c. per pound, for a pair of prime steers and he offered the same rate for seven others, but the owner would not take it having previously had a similar offer from shippers. Pretty good cattle sold at from 4c. to 4½c. and the grass-fed beasts at from 3c. to 4c. per lb., with some of the leaner arrivals at about 2½c. per lb. Shippers paid 4c. per lb. for good large sheep and the butchers paid from 3½c. to 4c. per lb. for the others. Lambs sold at from $2.50 to $5 each. G. Martel paid $5 each for four choice lambs. Fat hogs sold at from 5c. to 5½c. per lb., weighed off the cars.

Magistrates In England.

At the present time there are three classes of magistrates, or justices, created by English law, namely, county, borough and stipendiary. The two former require no professional qualifications, but the latter must be a barrister of at least seven years' standing. The selection or appointment in each case is much the same. The county magistrate is appointed by the crown, usually on the recommendation of the lord lieutenant of the county to the lord chancellor. The borough magistrate is appointed in the same way, though usually on the recommendation of the council. The stipendiary magistrate is the only one that is paid, and his appointment is made and his salary fixed on a petition of the council to the lord chancellor.

DONE BY A GIRL SWIMMER.

Swam For Forty-One Minutes Holding an Open Umbrella Over Her.

Milwaukee Sentinel.

The remarkable feat of swimming for forty-one minutes and during all that time using one hand to hold an open umbrella over her head, with a stiff wind blowing, was accomplished yesterday morning by Miss Lydia Winterhalter, of 695 Holton street. To win a wager and show an instructor at Rohn's swimming school that she was a better judge of her own endurance than he she undertook to remain in the water under these difficulties for half an hour and succeeded in over-reaching the time limit by eleven minutes.

The undertaking would have been a formidable one for any practised swimmer, for the burden of supporting an umbrella, light though it be, is considerable for that length of time without a shift from hand to hand, while it also means that one arm is useless as far as assisting in the operation of swimming is concerned, in the presence of a strong breeze, and it is seen the self-imposed task was one from which almost any one would shrink. For a young woman, therefore, to accomplish it with its tax on the strength and endurance, is a matter of special note, and in consequence Miss Winterhalter has found herself in the possession of a newly acquired reputation as a swimmer deserving of respectful consideration by the best of the many persons of that portion of the city who are accomplished in the aquatic line. The young woman, who is nineteen years of age, has been fond of the water ever since she was a child and she has always been an adept at the sport, but it was not until her achievement of yesterday that she had an opportunity to demonstrate what she could actually do.

Miss Winterhalter was at the swimming school yesterday forenoon with several companions, one of whom was attempting to swim about with an umbrella in her hand, when a discussion arose as to the difficulty of the feat, Miss Winterhalter expressing the opinion that it was not especially hard and that she could do it for half an hour if necessary. The feast was not made with any intention of putting it into practice, but as one of the swimming instructors who took part in the discussion insisted that the young woman could not possibly do as proposed, Miss Winterhalter's assurance asserted itself and she inquired how much he was willing to wager on his opinion. A $1 bet was the outcome and the other swimmers at the place gathered about to watch the experiment.

Miss Winterhalter was as good as her word. She swam into the deep water with the umbrella in her right hand, and set about to earn that dollar bill. The conditions were that she should hold the umbrella in the same hand without changing, though she could use any method of swimming that she desired. The young woman swam about a while on her side and then on her back, and then rested by treading water, but during it all the umbrella continued in its upright position above her head, and never gave the slightest indication of drooping, as the minutes passed by. The swimmer laughed and conversed with those watching the feat, and gave no sign of exhaustion, and when finally the half hour was pronounced up by the time-keepers and the wager was won, she decided to stay a little while longer. Finally, when forty-one minutes had elapsed she swam ashore apparently as fresh as when she stepped into the water, nearly three-quarters of an hour before.

Miss Winterhalter refused to accept her well-earned money, regarding her gain in local fame as quite sufficient to pay her for her accomplishment.
