The capture of Miss Stone, an American missionary, by Turkish or Bulgarian brigands, and the demands for twice her weight in gold as a ransom, has created a world-wide interest. A large sum of money has been raised by popular subscription to effect her release, but she is still in the toils. People are divided in opinion as to the advisibility of paying any ransom. It is argued, and it seems to us with justice, that if Miss Stone's release is effected by purchase all missionary effort might as well cease in that part of the globe. To bay her liberty is putting a premium upon crime, and inviting a repetition of the act.

Some people in this country have an idea that they are overtaxed, but compared with the Russian peasant our taxes are a mere bagatelle. The Princess Kropotkin, writing in the Youth's Companion, says that although the land holdings are very small the taxes are ruinous "It is usual," says the princess, "for a peasant family to pay from eight to ten dollars per male in the family or say $25 to $35 per family, besides all the indirect taxes, which are heavy, especially as the average money income of the peasant is very small. Within the last thirty years the peasants of central Russia have been brought to the verge of ruin. To pay rates and taxes he sells grain at half price, and then for nine months out of twelve the family eats bread adulterated with all sorts of things." This is a dark picture, but is only a portion of it. Let us be thankful that Russia and its influences are a long way removed from us, and let us meet our little tax bills with the conviction that "it might be worse."

Warts Aint Pretty

Why do you hang on to yours? Don't know how to cure them? Why Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor does the work in short order—you just try it. Guess your druggist has it all right, anyhow.

A Forest Tragedy

The chilly winds of November whistles among the leafless branches, but the soft undertones of summer are hushed. The woodland is carpeted thickly with dead leaves, and only among pines, and hemlocks, and balsam is a semblance of past woodland glory maintained. Even the music that had played among these is changed to a more wierd tone, a louder wail, as if the fingers of the harpist were executing a giant rhapsody ere the frost king wrapped the strings in ice and draped them in utter silence until spring awakening. Everything in the mournful woods cries out, "Death is upon us."

A man stands within this lethal chamber. He has travelled far and at much cost in time and money. To what end? Let us watch him and see. He is silently leaning against a tree and holding an iron thing in his hand. Occasionally he starts and listens. A Canadian jay alights in a a neighboring tree and twitters a mettalic protest at his presence. In a tall pine towering from yonder hill the dissalcreak of a raven rasps upon his ear. But hark! Other sounds drift upon our ears from far away. The man starts, lifts the iron thing and examines it carefully. The sounds grow louder and nearer. It is the baying of hounds. How musical it sounds to the man's ear. How his nerves tingle and every muscle quivers with subdued excitement. The sounds grow more distinct and the woods seem filled with melodious music. Suddenly a little form comes bounding along, anxious to escape from its pursuers. A beautiful form it is, with delicate limbs, graceful and lithe, its large eyes dilated with a terrible fear of portending catastrophe. Its beautiful head is thrown back, its nostrils throb, yet fleet of foot it flies through the forest like a beautiful spirit fleeing from evil. It is only a dainty fawn—one specimen of God's most perfect handiwork. Only six months of life has it seen. Only six months of life has it enjoyed its woodland home and has even yet not forgotten the mother who so ardently protected its little life when summer was young.

A sharp report echoes from hill to hill. Look! The little creature has fallen and does not rise, but pitiful bleatings fill the forest corridors. The dogs draw near. The fawn springs up once more but it can only run now with three of the dainty limbs. The other has been broken and dangles helplessly as it tries to shake off its pursuers by flight. But the dogs come up and jump upon its flank and sink cruel fangs into the quivering flesh, while the pitiful bleatings continue. It sees the man, and tearing itself away from the bloody jaws makes its way in haste to his side for protection! The iron thing is swung in air and descends upon the dainty head, which is crushed by the awful blow, and another forest tragedy has been enacted, while the appetite of man for "sport" has been appeased.

The woods grow silent again for death is here, around and above us. The raven croaks, and only the man seems happy.

Somebody sends us a copy of the Hartney, Man., Star, with the following item marked: "Mr. W. C. Robinson has been making a remarkably good threshing record this season and has no where accomplished more than on his own large farm. On Friday last the out put of wheat from his separator was 2,200 bushels, besides 50 bushels of oats, and for the previous week this machine averaged 1,824 bushels of wheat a day without interruption or much variation in the work. Equally good results should not be expected from every threshing machine as it takes years of experience to acquire the skill in operating that is possessed by Mr. Robinson."

The Companion's Seventy-Sixth Volume

In 1902—the seventy-sixth year of its publication—THE YOUTH'S COMPANION promises more varied attractions for its readers than ever before, and THE COMPANION always gives more than it promises. The government of the United States will be represented in contributions from Secretary of the Treasury Gage, Secretary of the Navy Long, Postmaster-General Smith, and Assistant Secretary of War Sanger—a list, it is believed, never equaled in a previous year.

The government of Great Britain will be represented by contributions from the Duke of Argyll, the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava and Rt. Hon. James Bryce, T. P. O'Connor and Winston S. Churchill, members of the House of Commons.

Other noteworthy contributors will be Wu Tingfang, Chinese minister at Washington, Booker T. Washington, president of Tuskegee Institute, Justice Brewer of the United States Supreme Court, Gen. Charles King and Rear-Admiral Hickborn, while more than two hundred of the most popular of living story writers will contribute from four to six facinating stories to each of the fifty-two issues of The Youth's Companion for 1902.

To all new subscribers for 1902 and to those renewing their subriptions The Companion will send its beautiful 1902 Calendar, lithographed in twelve colors and gold. By sending befor January 1st, the new subscriber will receive free all the remaining issues of 1901 from the time the subscription is received.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION,
195 Columbus Avenue, Boston, Mass.

On Wednesday morning about 2 o'clock the citizens of Thornbury were awakened from their slumbers by the ringing of the fire bell, when the large building opposite the Revere House and occupied by D. J. Fleming, wagon maker and painter; John Tucker, barber; T. D. Carscadden, implement agent; and Thos. Loucks, blacksmith; was discovered to be a mass of flames The fire had gained too much headway to be able to save anything in the building. The heat was so intense that nearly all the windows on the north east side of the Revere house were broken, and the woodwork scorched. The fire soon spread to the stable and driving shed owned by Mr. A. Smith, and in turn his house and marble shop fell a prey to the fiery fiend. It was only by a persistent struggle on the part of the fire fighters that the livery stable was saved. If the livery stable had burned it would have been impossible to have saved the planing mill, and it is hard to tell just where the fire would have ended. On the building where the fire started there is only an insurance of $500. It is owned by Mr. Thos. Loucks. Mr. Loucks had no insurance on the contents of his blacksmith shop. Mr. Fleming carried no insurance and his loss he estimates at about $1500. Mr. John Tucker had $250 insurance on the contents of his barber shop, and will probably lose $100. Mr. Carscadden was without insurance and his loss will probably reach $600. Mr. Alex. Smith had $1200 on his buildings and contents. He, also, will be quite a heavy loser. How the fire originated is a mystery.—Herald.
