Surnames and Their Origin

MUNSON.

Variations—Monson, Mansen.
Racial Origin—English, also Scottish.
Source—Given names.

Munson is a family name of quite simple and regular origin, but you'd hardly guess the given name from which it comes unless you were familiar with the manner in which the English of the Middle Ages abbreviated their given names.

Many of the shortened forms of given names were the same as those we use to-day, such as Dick for Richard, Harry for Henry, Ed. for Edward, Edgar for Edmond, and so on. But there was also a method of using other syllables of a name than the first for purposes of abbreviation and variation. This has virtually disappeared among English-speaking peoples, though it remains among the Germans among whom Hans for John (from "Johannes") is widespread.

In medieval England "Munn," "Mun" and "Mon" were regular variations of Edmond and Edmund, and the simple addition of the ending "son" to one or the other of these forms has given us the patronymics Munson, Monson and in some cases, through further variation, Manson.

Manson, however, is more likely to be of Scottish origin, a development of "Magnus-son." This is the name of one of the septs or branches of the Clan Gunn, that clan which rose to prominence in the fifteenth century as the followers of George Gunn, the "Crowner" of Coroner, a historic figure in Scottish history.

WELLER

Variations — Crosseller, Welman, Wells, Atwell.
Racial Origin—English.
Source—A place.

If medieval England had had a system of waterworks similar to those of to-day, there would be few, if any, families bearing names in this group. But medieval England drew its water from wells; hence the family names of Weller, Wells, Welman, Atwell and Crosseller.

Wells were important enough, and far enough apart in the days when family names began to form to make such names quite widespread. Families which lived in proximity to the wells quite naturally were distinguished by reference to the fact in the conversation of their neighbors.

The name Weller is a combination of the word "well," and an old Anglo-Saxon word "were," meaning "man." It is, in fact, exactly the same name as Welman. In medieval English the use of the termination "er" was much more common than it is to-day, though the modern use of it can by no means be considered restricted.

The name Atwell is a survival of another method of saying that a person lived near a well. The original form was "Atte Well," and such names as "Roger Atte Well" are quite common in the old records. The modern name of Wells may represent a shortening either of Atwell or Weller or Welman. The "crosseller" was one who dwelt near a "crosswell." It was customary in medieval England to erect shrines with little crucifixes, here and there along the roadside. Often such shrines would be located at or near a well, and such places were known as "crosswells."

In 1923 there were 333 establishments in Canada manufacturing products from metals other than iron and steel. These included 11 plants producing aluminium and aluminium wares; 81 plants fabricating brass and copper products; 20 plants in the white metal trade; 97 plants manufacturing precious metal products; 102 plants making electrical goods; and 16 plants making miscellaneous articles from non-ferrous metals.

Ontario Has An Interest in Her Children

"Who is that woman who has been driving a small car 'round the Township all week? What's her line, I wonder? She called at every house down the main road and I suppose she will stop here some day soon," questioned the bachelor of the "Corners" as he sat down beside the door to enjoy his after-dinner smoke and watch the sun go down in all its glory behind the wooded hills. "Why, weren't you at the meeting? Oh, no, it was held while you were in Toronto for the Winter Fair," replied his sister, who had come over just for a chat. And so he had all his questions answered: "That woman" was a nurse, but a nurse who helped people before they got sick, as well as when they had to stay in bed; a nurse who gave a lot of her time to the children—those who went to school and those who hadn't started yet and, most of all, the wee new babies just arrived in the homes throughout the Township. "The meeting was held in the Town Hall, and you see, young Doc (you remember he's been Medical Health Officer since his father died), told us he could arrange without a cent of cost to any of us or the Township, to get a nurse to come and give us help for ourselves and our children, just like the farmers for years have been getting help in improving their stock and producing better quality of grain, and every man and woman at the meeting wanted the nurse, so that's how she started." "And, Uncle, she was at the school to-day again, and I got a gold star," broke in his nephew, a young hopeful of nine years. "You got a star, and for what?" "Because for a whole week I had my chores done, my health chores, I mean; and you should hear the nurse tell us how easy it is to grow up strong and healthy and be able to pitch ball and slug a hockey stick—Health Talks, she calls them; and the girls at school have lessons too, "Little Mother's Classes," and learn how to look after a little baby. But, Uncle, she does heaps of things for big people too; she helped granny when she burnt her leg and when she heard Bert Jones cough she offered to drive him and his father over to the doctor, and Bert is getting better now." "And she visits every home you know," added his sister, "and talks over the health of every member of the family so don't be surprised when she calls on you. Well, I must be going now, and you won't see much of me for a few days because the women have asked the nurse to give a Home Nursing Class this week. Come, Son." "Yes, mother, to bed by eight o'clock is one of my health chores." "Where did the nurse come from, did you say?" "Oh, she is a Public Health Nurse from the Provincial Department of Health."

If you would like to know the name of the nurse in the district where you live, write to Department of Health, Spadina House, Toronto.

Maps and Trees.

Trees sometimes assume very grotesque shapes and one can trace in their branches the outlines of animals or birds.

Occasionally, too, the monarchs of the forest may resemble the giants and monsters of legendary lore. But not often do they grow in such a way as to give the idea of a geographical formation.

Such a tree, however, can be seen growing in "The Lady of the Lake" district in Scotland. Its short and long limbs give a distinct impression of the map of England.

NEW HEALTH FOR SUFFERING WOMEN

Aching Backs and Tired Limbs Need Not be Endured.

Too many women endure suffering that casts a shadow over half her existence. An aching back, tired limbs, attacks of faintness, splitting headaches need not be a part of a woman's life. Such trials indicate plainly that the blood is thin and watery and that the sufferer needs the help of a real tonic such as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Suffering women who have used this medicine speak of it in the highest terms. Among those who have been thus helped is Mrs. Ada L. Harman, Virden, Man., who writes:—"Following the birth of a still-born child a few years ago, I had a very serious time. I was so weak for months that I could not walk across the room without a feeling of faintness. I had scarcely strength enough to stand up, and when dressing would have to sit down two or three times. My face and lips were colorless, I had no appetite, and life did not seem worth living. A friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got six boxes. Before they were all gone I felt improved. My appetite was returning, color was coming into my face, and I was visibly stronger. I continued taking the pills and fully regained my former good health. I consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a blessing to weak women, and hope my experience will induce some other sufferer to try them."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box direct from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Experiences With Scrub Sires.

The most convincing argument in favor of the purebred sire instead of the grade and scrub are the actual reports which have been obtained from the use of both types.

The following are actual experiences of farmers on their own farms:

A farmer in Dufferin County, Ontario, had a calf dropped March 18th, 1919, which he sold on December 12th of the same year at 23½ cents per pound. This baby beef brought $169.21. This calf was out of a good grade cow which was herself sired by a purebred bull. The calf was also sired by an approved type of purebred sire. In the same stable on similar feeding and treatment at the same time was a calf also out of a fairly good grade cow but sired by a grade bull. This calf was dropped Nov. 5th, 1918, and was sold on the same day as the calf already referred to (Dec. 12, 1919). He brought 19 cents per pound or 4½ cents less per pound than his stable mate by the purebred bull and he brought $174.80. He was 4½ months older, had taken more feed and care, but did not have as good quality and so was not as profitable as his better bred stable mate. These calves were exceptionally well fed, but breeding counted to the extent of 4½ cents per pound and enabled the feeder to market his best calf at very close to as much money in 4½ months shorter time. This is a case where the feeding was right in both cases and where the purebred bull was directly responsible for the difference.

The experience of a London Township farmer, Middlesex County, with purebred and scrub bulls shows very closely the place of the scrub sire. Six years ago he had in his herd eight very even purebred cows that gave him eight bull calves from purebred sire. These were made steers and kept until two and one-half years old, finished on grass and when sold averaged $140 each. The next year the farmer was ailing and was unable to take his cows a distance to a purebred sire. A neighbor offered him the use of his scrub sire. The progeny from mating from which five steers were kept, fed and marketed under the same conditions brought $114 each, although there had been a slight rise in price during the year. This farmer stated that on the five steers he lost $130, in one year, and to the average farmer using a scrub sire on ten females the loss would be $260, from a beef standpoint alone. If the daughters of the scrub bull were kept in the herd this loss would show in their calves in lesser degree. This man claims that as soon as farmers keep an accurate profit and loss account the scrub bull will disappear.

A Peel County farmer's experience is as follows:—"Though we had been using purebred bulls for many years previous to a time about nine years ago, we yielded to temptation on a growthy looking, well-built grade Shorthorn for which we paid $35 at six months old. (Why should he not produce as good stock as a registered calf costing $75 more or less?) When his first calves were about four or five months old they seemed a poor lot, but the bull was kept for another season in spite of our observations. When the steers were put in to feed when rising two years, as is our custom, the folly of our selection most glaringly stared us in the face every time we went to feed them. They wouldn't respond to good feeding and attention. There was little pleasure in trying to fatten them and they went to market with few exceptions an inferior bunch. We had learned our lesson and sometimes think it was fortunate that we did keep the bull long enough to be really impressed forever by the experiences and loss of a cheap sire.

"Our next bull was of Grainford Marquis blood costing $100 at six months. Our first crop of calves healed our wounds. Fine growthy fellows, they accounted for any feed given, were a source of pleasure to the eye and brought the best price when sent to market. Counting the difference in weight, adding the extra value per pound and making allowance for feed consumed, there was a balance of from $20 to $25 per steer in favor of the good bull. A worse case was that of the heifers from the scrub bull. They had to be sold for beef. Instead of being able to select good heifers we had lost two years by using the scrub. Though it cannot be counted in dollars and cents, the satisfaction in feeding and caring for good animals is really worth more than all other features combined."

Wife—"Yes, and even honks with his nose when he's asleep."

BABY'S OWN TABLETS ALWAYS IN THE HOME

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she will use nothing else and as long as there are babies in the home you will always find a box of Baby's Own Tablets on hand. Thousands of mothers have become convinced through the actual use of the Tablets that there is nothing to equal them in banishing constipation and indigestion; breaking up colds and simple fevers; expelling worms and promoting that healthful refreshing sleep so necessary to the welfare of little ones. Among the thousands of mothers who praise Baby's Own Tablets is Mrs. Alex. J. Perry, Atlantic, N.S., who says:—"I always keep Baby's Own Tablets in the house as I know of no other medicine that can equal them for the minor ills that come to young children." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Safe That Screams.

A young English inventor has just brought out a new device which will add to the difficulties of the burglar.

It is a safe which screams as soon as it is touched by an unauthorized hand, and goes on screaming for four hours, or until someone who knows how to stop it comes along.

The scream is set in motion by delicate and secret mechanism connected with a vigorous motor-hooter, and is loud enough to arouse the entire neighborhood within a radius of a quarter of a mile or more.

Make Punishment Fit the Crime.

Dr. Margaret Patterson, woman magistrate of Toronto women's court, seems to believe that the punishment should fit the crime. In addition, she is a judge with a keen sense of humor who can see a joke coming a mile off.

A short time ago a young Hamilton girl appeared before her who was charged with stealing a pair of wondrously decorated and tremendously high-heeled shoes from a department store. When the punishment came up, the magistrate looked at the shoes, looked at the girl, and smiled a smile which seemed to evidence complete comprehension of all the follies and vanities of femininity.

"I think she should be sentenced to walk back to Hamilton in those shoes," she remarked.

For the Sake of the Horses.

A sergeant in the British Army, according to Punch, once lost his temper at a particularly awkward recruit.

"Never approach the 'osses from be'ind without speaking to 'em!" he roared. "If you do, that thick 'ead of yours'll get so kicked we shan't 'ave nothing but lame 'osses in the stable."

An interesting point in connection with the collection at St. John hatchery, New Brunswick, is that over 1,000,000 speckled trout and over 79,000 Brown trout eggs were taken at the ponds from parent fish, which themselves had been reared at this point from the fry stage.

PAINS IN LEFT SIDE AND BACK

Other Troubles Women Often Have Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lachine, Quebec.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I suffered with pains in my left side and back, and with weakness and other troubles women so often have. I was this way about six months. I saw the Vegetable Compound advertised in the 'Montreal Standard' and I have taken four bottles of it. I was a very sick woman and I feel so much better I would not be without it. I also use Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I recommend the medicines to my friends and I am willing for you to use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. M. W. Rose, 580 Notre Dame Street, Lachine, Quebec.

Doctor Said an Operation

Provost, Alberta.—"Perhaps you will remember sending me one of your books a year ago. I was in a bad condition and would suffer awful pains at times and could not do anything. The doctor said I could not have children unless I went under an operation. I read testimonials of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the papers and a friend recommended me to take it. After taking three bottles I became much better and now have a bonny baby girl four months old. I do my housework and help a little with the chores. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and am willing for you to use this testimonial letter."—Mrs. A. A. Adams, Box 54, Provost, Alberta.
