Rockvale.

From Our Own Correspondent

Owing to the terrific storms of last week the roads in this vicinity were impassable —the gravel road much worse than our pioneers have ever before witnessed. We have been informed that during the storm several were obliged to stay at the Rockvale House. Others in a similar predicament in the immediate vicinity, were seen wending their way homewards from their respective haunts after the storm ceased to be an excuse.

Mrs. I. Smith, who has been ill for so long, is rapidly improving. Her physician's skill in producing her rapid recovery seems to have been almost incredible even to himself. After entering her house at a recent visit (which by the way are now seldom necessary) he doffed his coat, and after a few preliminary remarks, proceeded to his patient's room. Finding it unoccupied he retraced his steps to the kitchen, and noticed to his surprise, that she to whom he had been talking, was none other than the one who had been lying ill so long.

Mr. Chas Stafford, sr., who has became the victim of a severe attack of apoplexy a couple of weeks ago, is slowly recovering his speech.

A decision has been reached concerning the site of the new school for this section, the north-west corner of Mr. Jos Sherwood's farm having been chosen. It was also decided that the building be brick, with a basement underneath. Operations will commence as soon as weather permits. We hear that forty two brave-hearted boys and girls made their way through drifted roads to attend school in the temporary building the day after the storm subsided (Thursday.) This is surely sufficient evidence that the steps being taken to secure a commodious school building, are not too previous.

The new Baptist minister, Mr. Cook, who is a returned missionary from the West Indies, will preach at "The Salem" on Sunday evening next.

Mr. David English, who has been acting as type-writer for some time in Minneapolis, is expected home shortly.

John Harrison, pioneer manufacture of Owen Sound, died Friday afternoon last, aged 78. Deceased came to Owen Sound when it was a small village, and, with two brothers, established over 50 years ago, the gristing, woolen and saw mills, still known as Harrison's Mills. After some years he retired from the firm and erected a saw mill, which has since developed into the John Harrison & Sons Company, having a large home and foreign trade in various manufactures of wood. Mr. Harrison was a leading member of the Baptist church, and devoted much of his time and means to moral and philanthropic movements. Modest and retiring, he never sought public office, but was always ready to serve his community in any capacity that promised to further its interests.
