When the despatch telling of Lord Methuen's disaster in Africa was read in the British parliament the Irish members cheered! Is there another country under the sun where anything like this could be done without bringing down retribution upon the guilty perpetrators? There is a growing impression that England is allowing just a little too much of this fire-eating business. In the past it has amused and enlivened the dull routine of parliamentary duties in England but over on this side of the water, where amusement and enlivening influences are superfluous, it is becoming a bit tiresome. The man who can cheer and gloat over disaster to his country's arms is a traitor who ought to be hung upon the same tree with ordinary murderers.

A serious disaster befel the British arms in Africa on the 7th inst., when the Boers made General Methuen a prisoner and captured 600 men and four guns. News like this causes something like the same effect that would result if one were to run against a clothes line in the dark. It jerks you up. We had been led to believe that the war was nearly over and that it was now all guerilla work, when along comes this man Delary, one of the cleverest generals among the Boers, with 1500 men, and defeats nearly an equal number of the English by a brave and determined attack in the grey hours of morning. It has been so long since the British have suffered anything like a serious defeat that we had thought such things were now matter of history, but alas! the sense of security was only fancied. And yet, we must not view this thing with too much seriousness. It was not thought the Boers could muster 1500 men in one body and in consequence discipline may have been slack, but the penalty may bring its reward in more caution and fewer casualties during the remaining hours of this unfortunate but necessary war.

The Shelburne Free Press, in speaking of the case of Easton, the Toronto man who thought he was cured by faith, and who has gone to join Dowie, says "it is evident that all the fools do not live in Chicago." Quite true, quite true; but it is filling up fast. But speaking of Dowie and his ilk, is not the credulity of human nature something to be marvelled at? What is there about this man to attract that which is best in humanity? Absolutely nothing except that through him many cures are said to have been made and with a certain class this is accepted as evidence of his divine mission. But then the Christian Scientists also claim miraculous cures and attract their followers. In the Catholic church miraculous cures are of frequent occurrence and therefore to its own people this is evidence of divine protection, and thousands of people annually visit St. Anne de Beaupre in Quebec and Lourdes in France to be healed. Dowie hurls his anathemas at these two bodies. As for the protestant churches he says they are doing the work of the devil; their ministers and all medical men are, according to him, in league with satan. Language such as that used by this impostor was never before heard in the name of religion, and still thousands of people such as the Free Press refers to still shove their whole worldly possessions into his pocket and blindly listen to his impious rantings in the mistaken idea that they are going to be led into something better in the way of religion than they have heretofore experienced. It is a laudable ambition, and pity alone should be entertained for the poor deluded creatures who will find, only too soon, that instead of corn they have been feeding on husks.

The funeral took place on Friday.

Mr. P. Loucks of the little village has had a rather hard time this winter. Six weeks ago he stepped backward off a farmer's sleigh and strained the cords of his left leg very severely. Mr. John Sharp, an old pioneer of Artemesia township, died on Monday morning in his 84th year, at his home 1½ miles south of the village, after an illness of about two years duration. Mr. Guy Blakeley held an auction sale on Feb. 28 which was fairly successful. It has been brought to our notice that the sale was not advertised in our locals. This was an unfortunate oversight. Mr. Blakeley purposes going to the Northwest this spring, and the Advance wishes him good luck.

Mr. Samuel Otris Holden, postmaster at the village of Nottawa, died suddenly on Monday, from heart failure. Mr. Holden had his breakfast in the morning, after which he was taken ill and passed away at twelve o'clock. The deceased was in his 67th year, and was a resident of the township for many years. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon, and was largely attended.—Collingwood Enterprize.

The Advance is pleased to note the success with which Miss Annie Richardson, daughter of Mr. M. K. Richardson of this place, is meeting as instructor at the Sackville, N.B., ladies college. Miss Richardson accepted this position last fall. The faculty of the Mt Allaston Musical Conservatory recently gave a concert at which Miss Annie recited, and of her work the St. John, N. B., Daily Sun has this to say: "Miss A. Richardson, who appeared for the first time before a Sackville audience, scored a brilliant triumph. All that the press of England and Canada have said about her is true and more She has a fine voice, a clear accent, perfect enunciation, and a dramatic power which makes her audience think and feel as she wills. In response to insistent applause Miss Richardson gave a humorous selection from The Mill on the Floss, which gave evidence of great versatility. In her second number Miss Richardson was equally happy, and when she finished the enthusiasm was unbounded."

Wednesday afternoon of last week the residence of Mr. John Boyd, Proton, was the scene of a happy event, when his youngest daughter, Miss Maud, was married to Will Challenger, son of Joshua Challenger of the same township. The ceremony was performed at 4 p. m. by Rev. W. W. Sparling in the presence of quite a large number of interested friends. Miss Carass, of Harrison, playing the wedding march. The bride was handsomely gowned in cream silk trimmed with chiffon, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. She was attended only by a flower girl in the person of her niece, little Miss Boyd, of Flesherton. The supper which was served was sumptuous, and the presents were particularly fine. After a wedding trip to Stratford, Mitchell, etc., the happy young couple will start housekeeping on the Challenger homestead. They are both popular young people in their neighborhood, and have the best wishes of all for much happiness. —Mt. Forest Rep.

A Farmer's Suicide.

Samuel Miller, a farmer living just this side of Markdale on the T. & S. road for many years, and a cousin of Jailer Miller of Owen Sound, committed suicide in Toronto bay on Sunday morning. The Mail and Empire gives the following account of the case:

Samuel Miller, a Markdale farmer, deliberately ended his life at 5 minutes to 10 o'clock yesterday morning by jumping into the waters of the bay from the Bertram shipyard docks at the foot of Bathurst street.

Neither the man's relatives nor the people in the house where he boarded, 332 Adelaide Street west, can assign any reason for his self-destruction. He left a letter but it does not shed any light on that point.

Deceased, who was a prosperous farmer living near Markdale, came to Toronto to reside some three months ago, disposing of his farm at the time, and took rooms at 332 Adelaide Street west, with his wife and daughter. Tiring of boarding, he decided to rent a house of his own, and with this idea he left home yesterday morning at 9 o'clock for the announced purpose of trying to find a suitable residence.

It was only a few minutes before ten o'clock that Thomas Thompson, watchman on the Richelieu and Ontario steamer Kingston, and John Wright, watchman for the Bertram Company, noticed a man walking along the Bertram docks. Some minutes later they saw a figure dart across the dock and take a flying leap into the water, which was open just there, between the steamer Kingston and Montreal.

The body did not rise to surface, and it was some time before it was recovered by J. R. Richardson, mate of the Chippewa, with a pike-pole.

On the wharf, quite close to the spot from which deceased jumped, was found his coat, and on top of it a note written in lead pencil, and weighted down by a stone. It was merely a request that certain friends in Markdale would take care of his wife and daughter.

Nothing can be suggested as to the case of Miller's suicide, but a fit of temporary insanity Before he left home he took from his pocket a large roll of bills, which he left on a table in his room.

Miller is 52 years of age, and is survived by his widow and one daughter. Coroner A. J. Johnson investigated the case, but it is not likely that an inquest will be ordered. The body will, if possible, be taken to Markdale this morning for burial.

Mrs. McIver, the old lady who was mentioned last week so favorably by a Eugenia correspondent, took ill of inflammation on Friday and died Tuesday afternoon. The body was shipped Wednesday morning to Stayner, where deceased has a daughter residing.

The Advance has received from the author, Rev. T. Watson of Colborne, a neat little volume of poems. Mr. Watson was Baptist minister in Flesherton a few years ago, removing from here to Colborne. While here, and subsequent to his removal, many of his pieces found place in our columns and were always welcome. The book is published by William Briggs, Toronto. No doubt many of Mr. Watson's friends in this vicinity would like to secure copies which may be had from the author, Colborne Ont.
