A GRATEFUL LETTER

From a Lady Made Well by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

"I wish from my heart I could persuade every person who is run down in health to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial." Thus writes Mrs. Louie Mitchell, Oak Point, Man., who further says:—"About a year ago I was a weak woman, suffering from a run down system and impoverished blood. Any little exertion would cause my legs to tremble and my heart to throb violently. I could not sweep a room or walk fifty feet without being exhausted. Then I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after taking only six boxes I am as well and strong as ever. I can walk and run without stopping every few seconds gasping for breath as previously. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will be my stand-by in the future if ever my blood needs building up again, and I shall always find pleasure in recommending them to anyone needing a tonic.

There are many troubles due to weak, watery blood which can easily be overcome by a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The sole mission of this medicine is to enrich and purify the blood and when that is done all the varied symptoms of anaemia disappear, and good health returns. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Nothing But the Truth.

The fact that Douglas Fairbanks, despite his acting abilities, is one of the least pretentious of men, lends point to a story he is fond of telling.

It concerns another film actor, not by any means in the first rank, who thought no end of a lot of himself.

The director of the film company did not share the actor's opinion, however, and sacked him. The latter thereupon sued the company for breach of contract, claiming heavy damages.

Counsel for the company demanded to know why he assessed the damage he alleged he sustained at so exorbitant a rate.

"Because," he replied proudly, "I am the greatest cinema actor in the world."

Later one of his friends took him to task for so loudly singing his own praises.

"I know it must have sounded somewhat conceited," replied the actor, "but I was on my oath to speak the truth, so what could I do?"

A Puzzler.

The Prince Chichibu, second son of the Emperor of Japan, speaks and writes English fluently.

Like most foreigners, however, he found considerable difficulty at first in mastering the peculiarities of our language.

Once, when he was quite a lad, his English tutor was trying to define the use of the article "a."

"You must not," he explained, "say 'a houses' or 'a horses.' You cannot place 'a' before a plural noun."

The young prince picked up his tutor's prayer book, which he had evidently been studying in his spare time.

"Then how," he asked in all seriousness, "do you account for this?" indicating a word with his forefinger.

The tutor looked over his royal pupil's shoulder.

The word he was referring to was "amen."

An Advertising Stunt.

I should imagine that Mr. Henry Ford is the only man in the world who has seized upon a gibe against himself and used it as an advertisement.

It came about in this way. One day there appeared in an obscure corner of an obscure country newspaper this paragraph:

"A Ford car will carry you anywhere—except into Society."

The quaint humor of this appealed to Mr. Ford, who wired to the editor offering him one hundred dollars for the copyright.

The offer was accepted, and shortly afterwards all America was laughing over Henry Ford's newest advertising stunt, for he had had the little saying placarded on the hoardings, in letters a foot deep, in practically every town and village from Maine to California.

Surnames and Their Origin

HALES.

Racial Origin—English.
Source—A locality.

All you need to discover the origin of this family name is a geography or gazetteer, for it is the name of a town, or rather a village.

England is full of tiny communities, to-day far overshadowed by the great modern cities, but which in medieval times were important landmarks and centres. That is the reason that certain small communities to-day have comparatively large representation in Parliament, while larger ones have comparatively small representation. The English have been sluggish in adjusting their political representation to the shifting of population.

Hales is a village in Gloucestershire. It is also the name of a small town in Norfolk; and with the first to use it as a surname it simply indicated that they had come from either one or the other of these localities.

The name is said to designate in Cornish-British speech the low level lands washed by a river.

REATH.

Variations—Reith, Ram.
Racial Origin—Irish.
Source—A given name.

As a usual thing family names of Irish origin are rather easily distinguishable as such by their form. Here is one, however, which is more likely to be considered English than Irish, especially when you find it in the form of Ram, which is virtually an Anglicization according to meaning rather than sound.

The Irish form of the name is "O'Reithe" and was borne by a clan established, so far as can be ascertained, about the year 450 A.D. or 500, thus antedating by some six centuries the majority of English family names, and by three or four the majority of Gaelic ones.

The name was derived from the descriptive surname which the chief who founded the clan was known, that of "Ceann Reith" or "Ram's ead." This chieftain was a descentant of one "Fothach Argthach," who ruled as "High-King" over all Ireland for a period of several years prior to 285 A.D.

Steering in Their Sleep.

It was recently stated that a motorist had been fatally injured in a road accident caused by dozing while he was driving.

A number of motoring experts seem to incline to the view that many drivers have dozed at the driving-wheel at one time or other during their career. But they add that usually in such cases the man who dozes is still perfectly capable of driving his car without danger to himself or other passengers.

One case which occurred during the War seems to suggest that, in such circumstances, some special instinct keeps the sleeper right. An Engineer who was driving for the General Staff was ordered out with a big car after a heavy day. He found it difficult to keep awake, and finally succumbed to sleep. He was unconscious for about ten minutes, when he suddenly awoke to find that he had brought his car correctly to a standstill in front of a closed level crossing.

MANY MOTHERS RECOMMEND THEM

Baby's Own Tablets Are Fine for Nervous, Sleepless Children.

From Canada the fame of Baby's Own Tablets is spreading over the world. Mothers recommend them to other mothers and wherever they are tried nothing but words of praise are heard for these pleasant tasting little tablets that promptly relieve the minor ailments of young children.

"Baby's Own Tablets are one of the best remedies for children's ailments I have ever used," says Mrs. Arthur T. Allen, of Auburn, Me. "My little girl was nervous and could not sleep. I tried the tablets and she was relieved at once. She was also troubled with constipation and nothing seemed to help her. I had used the tablets but a short time before her bowels were regular. All mothers should keep Baby's Own Tablets in the house for they are a valuable remedy."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by all druggists or will be mailed on receipt of price, 25 cents per box, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. A little booklet, "Care of the Baby in Health and Sickness," will be sent free to any mother on request.

Dental Health.

Personal appearance and comfort prompt us to care for our teeth, but the bad effects of diseased teeth (such as rheumatism, neuritis, heart disease, etc) are sufficiently serious to induce us to use every means to keep our teeth healthy.

To assist every man, woman and child in Ontario in the attainment of "healthy teeth in a healthy mouth," the Department of Health, through the Division of Dental Services, is carrying out a program as follows:

(1) Providing (without charge) lectures on dental subjects.

(2) Making dental surveys of the schools without cost to a municipality.

(3) Assisting communities to establish school dental service.

(4) Promoting Dental work in hospitals (dental services being given gratuitously, the hospital supplying equipment).

(5) Assisting in the establishment of dental clinics in factories, thereby helping the worker in industry.

If you desire information about dental service in schools; if you would like a speaker for a club meeting; if you want to know about dental clinics in hospitals or factories; if you wish copy of free pamphlet on "Proper Care of the Teeth," write to the Department of Health of Ontario, Spadina House, Toronto.

Its First Compliment.

The Court had settled down to enjoy itself. A motorist was in the dock on a charge of speeding, and, unfortunately for the accused, the magistrate was an anti-motorist.

Nearly all the people present were aware of the magistrate's aversion to car owners and drivers, and therefore, were looking forward to some dry compliments from him.

"The officer," began the magistrate in his pompous way, "says that you were going at forty miles an hour."

"Very well," replied the delinquent, smiling quite happily.

The magistrate looked very much surprised, and then said:

"You are the first man I ever saw who didn't seem angry with the officer."

"Well," was the answer, "it's the first compliment that has ever been paid to my old bus."

The Unfamiliar Telephone.

Of all the white man's wonders the telephone was perhaps the most inexplicable to the savage mind—until the radio came to puzzle it still more hopelessly. The first contact of a primitive race with the telephone always produces amusing results. The explorer MacMillan tells a funny story, reprinted in the Southwestern Telephone News, about an Eskimo's experiment with a piece of telephone wire.

As the warm sun of the short northern summer melted the snow over the former camping ground of a previous expedition, Mr. MacMillan discovered considerable debris, including some wire and one odd telephone mouthpiece. His Eskimo companion showed intense interest in the white man's explanation of the use of the telephone. When the explorer turned in for a few hours' sleep, the ingenious native tried his hand at telephone line construction.

Along the bleak Arctic coast ran a straggling row of split boards about five feet high, from which was festooned a couple of hundred yards of wire. A single telephone mouthpiece dangled at one end of the line, and before it stood a solitary Eskimo. Into this improvised telephone he shouted a few words in his native language, then ran madly along the pole line, clapped the far end of the wire to his ear and listened for his own message. All he heard was the wind whistling over the ice-bound waters along the grim northwest coast of Greenland.

Disappointed, but still hopeful, the Eskimo returned to the mouthpiece. Evidently feeling that he had not sprinted quite fast enough the first time, he repeated the process with an extra burst of speed, only to be disappointed again. Just then there appeared round the corner of the hut the white explorer who had given him the scrap wire and the old mouthpiece. Immediately the Eskimo ceased his efforts and laughingly remarked that he knew the white man was lying when he told about the telephone, for nobody could talk through a wire that had no hole in it!

However, the Eskimos are not the only persons who do not understand telephony. Incredible as it sounds, there are people in England to-day who do not recognize a telephone instrument when they see it! The London Telegraph and Telephone News says that a respectable-looking and seemingly well-educated Briton noticed a row of telephones on a table at the Wembley Exposition, fixed one eye at the transmitter of the nearest instrument and gazed long and earnestly into it as if it had been a spyglass. Evidently the view failed to come up to his expectations, for he tried instrument after instrument in the same way and regretfully walked off in quest of more thrilling entertainment.

Ask for Minard's and take no other.

A Tribute to "Mothers."

Mothers never die. Sometimes when there is a vacancy in the heavenly hosts God sends down to earth and summons a mother, and when she reaches Him she has nothing to learn in the way of becoming an angel, for she always was one.—Charles Wagner.

PAINS IN LEFT SIDE AND BACK

Other Troubles Women Often Have Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lachine, Quebec.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I suffered with pains in my left side and back, and with weakness and other troubles women so often have. I was this way about six months. I saw the Vegetable Compound advertised in the 'Montreal Standard' and I have taken four bottles of it. I was a very sick woman and I feel so much better I would not be without it. I also use Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I recommend the medicines to my friends and I am willing for you to use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. M. W. Rose, 580 Notre Dame Street, Lachine, Quebec.

Doctor Said an Operation

Provost, Alberta.—"Perhaps you will remember sending me one of your books a year ago. I was in a bad condition and would suffer awful pains at times and could not do anything. The doctor said I could not have children unless I went under an operation. I read testimonials of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the papers and a friend recommended me to take it. After taking three bottles I became much better and now have a bonny baby girl four months old. I do my housework and help a little with the chores. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and am willing for you to use this testimonial letter."—Mrs. A. A. Adams, Box 54, Provost, Alberta.
