A Trip to England,

BY JOHN COULTHARD.

I left Flesherton station on the first train on the tenth of October, being the day the Duke and Duchess was to be in Toronto. The cars were very much crowded with people going to see the royal pair. I saw them and all the sights to be seen in Toronto, which were beautiful. I left Toronto 10.30 p. m., and arrived at Montreal about 8 a. m., and left again about 12 a. m. for Quebec. I arrived there all right. Nothing happened out of ordinary on the train. I went on board the boat Manitoba, a new boat, first trip, about 600 feet long, belonging to the old Beaver Line, now Elder Dempster, the same night, but we did not get away until noon next day. Men were loading on stuff all night. I could not sleep very much that night. At noon the boat started, while we were eating dinner. It went so steady and quiet we did not know it was moving until we came up on deck and found that we were quite a distance from the city. It was a beautiful day and the whole of the passengers seemed to enjoy the sights to be seen on both sides of the river as we steamed along until darkness put an end to our view. Sunday, October 13th, was a fine morning I was expecting religious service but there was none. The day passed off very quietly, the people taking in all the scenery that was to be seen, which was fast passing out of our view. Monday, October 14th, brought a great change in the weather. The fog was very dense, and the fog horn was blowing very often, so when we looked on the deck to see what kind of a morning it was we found the boat was standing still, and it had been for some little time, and we did not move for 26 hours. It seemed a long time to us. Next morning the fog lifted. We then steamed away again, and on all sides of us large icebergs could be seen. This is on the banks of Newfoundland. We could see whales blowing up water here and there. Two little sparrows kept us company up to this time and then disappeared. I think they must have gone on some icebergs. Everything went on nicely after this, with the exception of a few that took sick. One poor man and his wife, from Toronto, going to Australia, with six children, small at that, got very sick, but the children did not feel it very much. We had on board men from Dawson City, California, Dakota, Chicago, and all over the Dominion. Nearly all were going on a visit and most of them coming back in the spring.

The night of the 21st we were told we would see land in the morning. We were very anxious to see land again and we were out early, before it was light, and sure enough the green isle was on one side and bonny Scotland on the other, but rather dim. As we steamed away along the coast of Ireland, the sick ones were out on deck and it seemed to do them a great deal of good. To see land was a good medicine and it cheered us all, and as we were leaving dear old Ireland we came in sight of the Isle of Mann. That kept us busy all day thinking what time we would get into Liverpool. Here we saw a great many fish swimming alongside of the vessel and every few feet they jumped right out of the water—about every 3 feet—when they struck the water again. We began to see boats now, going in all directions. We arrived at the mouth of the Mersey just as it was getting dark. Here we came in view of New Brighton with its myriads of lights, a most beautiful park with a grand tower 300 feet high. It was a beautiful sight as we steamed past it. The night getting very dark, considerable fog on the river, we soon had to stop to take on the pilot. We had some time to wait before he came. The boat had to whistle a great deal, I suppose to let others passing up and down every few minutes know that a liner was there in the road. Well, we finally got to the dock about 11 p.m.

We had given up the idea of getting off that night, but not so the captain, for we were told as we were nearing the dock that all the luggage out of the hold was ready to shove off as soon as the boat was tied up, and we had to follow it. Then you may be sure there was a commotion on board to hunt up our little traps we had in our berths with us, and shaking of hands and bidding good-bye, as some of us had got very friendly and now we had to part, not likely ever to meet again.

Our boat stood above the dock a good many feet. Their runners slide up from the dock to the edge of the boat and send down the trunks and valises at a rapid rate Some of them were not any better of the concussion at the bottom. Then the luggage was carted into a big shed, there to be examined by the custom officers. Each one had to attend to the opening of his own luggage. I did not hear of any smuggling going on. Finally we left the shed about 1 a. m., a nice time to dump strangers in a strange city. All the houses were closed or nearly so, and all in bed. There were two cabs there to take the cabin passengers but we had to do the best we could to find lodging for the balance of the night. A young man from Whitehaven that I had got acquainted with on the boat, had been in Canada for about 5 months, and as I was going to Whitehaven we went off together, and as we got outside a man met us and wanted to carry our valises. We made a bargain with him or 1 shilling to find us a good temperance house that we might lodge in for the night He knew of several of them not far off and the first one we came to was closed up, all in bed so, we went on to the next, a block further, and it was the same. He said there was another a little way on, we would try it, so we went and could see a light in one of the window. They were just closing the house, so we used the knocker on the door and a young lady came and opened it. We enquired if we could get lodging for the night. She said wait a minute and I will see mother. She was soon back and said they had just one bed unoccupied. That had already been engaged, but they thought the party was not coming, being so late, and told us if we could both sleep in one bed we were welcome to it so we were very glad to get the chance, as it was near morning then. Well, we were shown to our room, and behold there were four beds in it, three with two persons in each, so we tumbled into bed without any ceremony. I couldn't sleep, but my mate slept like a top. At daybreak the others began to get up and I soon learned by their talk that they were going on board a vessel for New York, they being over to England on a visit to their friends, so I commenced to talk with them and got up too, my mate still sleeping away, and at breakfast table we had a great chat. They were going on the water and we were just come off it. After getting acquainted we parted, they to the boat, we to the railroad. I will finish in another letter.

They Father Consumption

Bad coughts, colds, and catarrh are responsible for consumption more than is traceable even to heredity. Catarrhozone cures more quickly than ordinary remedies because it is the only antiseptic yet discovered that it is volatile enough to reach the root of the trouble in remote parts of the lungs and bronchial tubes, and impregnate every particle of the air breathed with its healing, germ-killing vapor. Colds can't last ten minutes, or coughs more than thirty minutes when Catarrhozone is inhaled. It clears nose, throat and air passages at once, stops dropping, headache, and eradicates catarrh from any part of the system. Two months' treatment, $1.00; trial size 25c. Druggists, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

The Critical Time of Life.

Is between the years of fifty-seven and sixty-two. Nature's power slows down, vitality becomes less, and the progress of decay sets in. A means of extending old age and decreasing vigor is to take Ferrozone after meals. Ferrozone keeps up the appetite, and in the formation of red, vitalizing blood, imparts clearness to the tiring brain, force, energy and spirits just when they are needed most. To take Ferrozone regularly means adding from ten to twenty years to life. Large boxes 50c., or 6 boxes for $2.50, at Druggists, or Polson & Co, Kingston, Ont. Sold by W. E. Richardson.
