

On The Main Street

with Ford Moynes

Mar. 9/68

Do you remember when Fred Tilcock had the first Radio Station and studio in Lindsay and the call letters were 10BL? When there was a large frame school called the Union School immediately west of the Collegiate Institute? When E. E. Maxsom operated a green house where Hick's Flowerland is now located? When the old Post Office on Kent Street was draped with long purple streamers when Queen Victoria was mourned? When there was a roller skating rink on Lindsay Street south — in the rink used for hockey? When there was a fire bell in a tower at the corner of Lindsay and Kent Street east and another one at the corner of King and St. Paul Streets?

When the first silent motion theatre was on Kent Street where the Lindsay Bakery is situated? When Coatsworth Inn was at the northeast corner of William and Russell Streets? When there was a row of small frame dwellings on Caroline Street on the west side between Queen and Colborne Streets and a similar row on the east side of Lindsay Street between Queen and Colborne Streets? When Lindsay's first colored resident Thomas lived on Kent Street on the north side near Adelaide Street?
