Durham merchants will have to look to themselves. Farmers are this year coming from within four miles of that town to deal with Flesherton merchants. The high prices paid for wool here this year is attracting trade.

The election for reeve held in Osprey on Monday resulted in Mr. Morrison's return. There were three candidates, viz., Messrs. Clark, Kaitting and Morrison. The vote stood: Clark 140, Kaitting 67, Morrison 154. Majority for Morrison, 14.

A rather amusing incident occurred at the Methodist Sabbath school on Sunday afternoon last, which caused many a smile, and will bear the telling about. During the course of the exercises a gentleman was offering up a prayer. After praying for the success of the school, etc., he also implored the divine blessing upon the superintendent and asked that that gentleman might be prospered "in the business in which he was engaged." The kernel of the joke lies in the fact that the superintendent was absent and was at that moment burying a man in his capacity of undertaker!

Don't forget that we are giving good bargains in Men's heavy lace boots, some grain leather bluchers, some Granger style. Regular price $1 25 to $1.75; going at from 90 cts. to $1.00 per pair at Clayton's.

Secretary Graham of the Farmers' Institute drew our attention the other day to the fact that there is a sort of blight on the apple trees this year with which he is unfamiliar. Many of the leaves are only half grown and curled while a sort of rusty spot appears on them. The showing for fruit is good, but whether this blight will affect it later on is uncertain.

A son of Rev. Mr. Cook got hold of Mr. Wilson's Winchester rifle the other day (the family are boarding with Mr. Wilson). The father happened to see the youngster and took the gun from him, after which he proceded to explain a gun's mechanism to the boy and impress on his mind the danger of handling it. In some manner Mr. Cook pulled the trigger, and there was an explosion. The projectile smashed two pictures on the wall and embedded itself. It is needless to say that both father and son were duly impressed with the dangerous character of a Winchester, and it was some time before their nerves were reduced to normal tension.

Killed on the Railway.

A peculiar and fatal accident occurred on the railway 1½ miles south of Flesherton station, at Waller's crossing, on Friday last by which Allan McLean (or as he was best known, Whittaker) a resident of the Station, lost his life instantaneously by being run over. Between 11 and 12 o'clock that day the freight from Owen Sound, in charge of Engineer Roblin and Conductor Walker, left this station with a train of 28 cars, intending to pass the noon express at Proton Station. When a short distance south of the lake Engineer Roblin saw what he thought was a coat lying between the rails, and it was not until within a few rods of the object that he recognized it as a man. He made every effort to stop his train but was not able to do so until four cars had passed over the unfortunate victim. When taken from under the train McLean was quite dead. Deceased was a member of the section gang since last April under Foreman Ashdown and went to work that morning as usual but half an hour after beginning work complained of feeling unwell and was advised to go and lie down, which he did. This was about 8 a. m. The section men were working in the immediate vicinity and half an hour before the accident left McLean sitting against a tree in the field at Mr. Waller's crossing, smoking his pipe, while they went up the track a short distance to do some work. Mr. Ashdown says he stood on the fence and looked up and down the track after the train whistled in leaving this station, and that McLean was not on the track then. Ten minutes later Mr. Ashdown's men were called by the train crew to take charge of the remains.

An inquest was called on Saturday by Coroner Bibby with the following gentleman as jurymen: Gibson Collinson, Arch. McMullen, Wm. Muir, Thos. Gilchrist, John Stewart, Andrew McAulay, Thomas McArthur, James Hemphill, Geo. Hawke, Malcolm Fergnson, Jas. Gardiner, J. B. Egan, Wilson McMullen, Jas. McMullen, John Snell. A post mortem was held by Dr. Neely of Markdale. After viewing the remains the jury went down to the scene of the accident, after which the inquest was proceeded with in the Orange Hall. Foreman Ashdown was the first witness called and simply told the facts as we have given them. He was positive deceased was not on the track ten minutes before the train came along.

Andrew Rutledge and other members of the section gang gave evidence but could net advance anything important to show why deceased was on the track.

Angus Whittaker, sworn, said: I noticed that morning that McLean was not as well as usual. Did not want him to go to work. He was a half-brother of mine. He was not subject to fits or fainting spells. Could not say what caused him to lie on track. He had been drinking the night before, and was at the hotel that morning before breakfast. Did not show any signs of being drunk that morning. Had a bottle at tool house but did not see him take anything out of it. Do not know whether he took it with him or not. Do not think he could have had it with him or I would have seen it. The reason I thought him unable to go to work was because I noticed before breakfast that he staggered. He seemed all right when he went to work.

Engineer Roblin then told the story of the accident as follows: I left Flesherton with engine 610 with freight train consisting of 28 loads, about 11.20, on the morning of June 20. When 1½ miles south of Flesherton, while running at about 15 miles an hour, I noticed what I took to be a garment on the track, about six car lengths ahead of the engine, [this was as the train rounded a curve—ED.] When about three car lengths from the object I saw it was a man, lying on the opposite side of some crossing planks in between the rails, with his head towards the engine. I at once applied the air brake, shutting off steam at the same time. We stopped and ran back, Fireman Hamilton and myself, and found this man lying under about the fifth car from the engine. He was dead. I called to Brakesman Forbes to go back and bring Conductor Walker and tell him to get the section men, who were working back of the train, as we had run over a man. When Conductor Walker came over Fireman Hamilton and myself went to the engine and slacked back in order to get the truck of a car clear of his body. It was not possible to distinguish it was a man any sooner. There was no movement of the body when I saw it first or afterward. Noticed only a slight bleeding from his legs. Was not bleeding much when I saw him. Found no movement of muscles whatever. Stopped train in about eight car lengths. Believed the man dead before he was struck. It was inside a minute after he was struck that I saw him.

The fireman, brakesman and conductor each gave evidence to the same effect.

Dr. Neely then described the condition in which he found the body, which was not badly mangled. The side of the head was crushed in, skin torn in several places, and both legs broken. Every bone in left side of skull was fractured and ribs broken and projecting into lung cavity. The heart appeared normal, and as though it had been actually beating at time of accident. The stomach was empty. The condition of blood vessels led him to believe that death was due to shock.

The jury, after hearing all the evidence, produced the following verdict:

"That the deceased came to his death by being run over with a train, no blame being attached to anyone."

Three are three theories advanced as the cause of death, viz.: That deceased came out on the track and fell in a faint; that his brain was dulled with the liquor and he fell asleep; that he deliberately lay down intending to commit suicide. If the latter he could not have chosen a a better place, as the crossing partially hid him from the engineer as well as from the section gang where they were working. As for the first theory the fact that his dinner pail was standing beside the track, and Mr. Ashdown's evidence that he was not there ten minutes before, seems to dispose of this. The funeral took place to Flesherton cemetery on Sunday afternoon. Deceased was 41 years of age and unmarried.

Sir Wilfred Laurier arrived at Liverpool on Saturday night, and went direct to London.

Ninety American soldiers dave died of cholera in the Phillippines. The total deaths to date are 6,676.

The Maple Leaf saw works at Galt, owned by Shurly & Dietrich, were burned on Saturday. The loss is $75,000.

One of the old landmarks of Melancthon township was destroyed by fire on Tuesday forenoon. The old building was used for many years as an hotel and was built by the late James Beachell, the first warden of Grey county, in the early fifties. The farm on which the building is situated was owned by the late William Jelly and Simon Jelly, of Shelburne, for a number of years and was sold last fall by Simon Jelly and the executors of the William Jelly estate to Steve Sawden. The house at the time of the fire was occupied by Abram Markle, the tenant, who managed to secure most of his furniture. The high wind on Tuesday and defective stovepipes no doubt caused the fire. There was no insurance on the building. —Free Press.
