LAW AND HUMAN NATURE

Another case of the owner of an automobile having to pay $7000 damages to two persons injured in his car when it met with an accident, is reported in Western Ontario. The two "friends" had accepted the invitation by the car owner to a trip to a neighboring town. An accident occured, and were awarded $7000 by the Court. Had those friends asked to be taken on the trip it would have been different. But they were guests, and as such entitled to the protection and safe transit by their host. Law is a queer thing. So is human nature, says the Orrilia Times Packet.

A car belonging to Robt. Ewen of Duriam was completely destroyed by fire last week.

Miss MacPhail To Her Critics

ism without the safeguards that western countries have found it necessary to devise."

Then I come to the incident of the shooting of the Chinese students; this was just a year ago, and I think we can all recall it. The Chinese students were protesting by a peaceful parade against the conditions to be found in Japanese factories, and they were shot down by Indian police on the orders of British officers. The Indian police certainly would not have shot them down had it not been for the orders of their officers, so I think I am not very far from the truth when I say it was the British police. I was in error, however, and I very gladly accept the correction, An inquiry was made into this shooting incident, because the Chinese made a charge that they had been shot down, which charge was found to be substantiated in a very long account which is to be found in the London Times of June 16, 1925. This covers several pages and any hon. member can verify what I have said by reading it.

Much more recently than that, however, the anti-national forces in China, as recently published in the New Leader of February 6, 1927, shot down those who were opposed to them. Sir Percival Phillips, writing to the Daily Mail, of which he is correspondent, describes the happenings in the following words: "The executions have been terrifyingly informal. Pickets and agitators, including ignorant coolies and spectacled students, are quickly beheaded wherever they are found intimidating shopkeepers or scattering Cantonese leaflets. A runner is sent to summon the 'execution patrol', which comes up with the headsman swinging the bared blade. The culprit is forced to his knees as the soldiers keep the crowd back. A moment later his head is fastened to a wooden cage, which is all ready, and is nailed to a pole for the contemplation of the populace."

Further on the New Leader, which is the official organ of the Labour party in England, says, and the words are in italics: "They would not have happened if the British forces had not been massed at Shanghai."

I think I am only stating a fact when I state that Russia wisely withdrew and gave up her concessions. I said she did it wisely. I do not think she did it from virtuous motives; she made a virtue of necessity. I have an article here which appeared in the Weekly News, published in Winnipeg, Manitoba, on Friday, March 25, 1927, in which this statement is made:

"Russia was shrewd enough to make a virtue of necessity, and give up her privileges in China while the other powers were holding tight to theirs. Naturally, the Chinese appreciated this move."

Later on the article says: "Germany's privileges in China were taken away from her by the treaty of Versailles. As a consequence, though before the war Germany was probably the most unpopular western nation in China, German trade in that country is thriving while British trade is at a standstill, and even American commerce seriously embarrased."

I want to quote just one more paragraph: "The moment western powers give up special privileges and base their intercourse with China on commercial grounds, there will be an end to drives and boycotts, and China will trade most with those who best meet her economic needs. Such, at least, is the doctrine of European liberals."

I said in the letter that I wish Canada, which is a member of the League of Nations, would protest against the breaking of the peace of the world, or taking a chance at breaking the peace of the world, by the action of the powers in China. Under Article XI of the treaty of Versailles that is possible: "It is also declared to be the friendly right of each member of the League to bring to the attention of the assembly or of the council any circumstance whatever affecting international relations which threatens to disturb international peace, or the good understanding between nations upon which peace depends." And so Canada would be well within her right in protesting against anything that tends to endanger the peace of the world. There was an interesting report in the McGill Daily, a students' paper issued at McGill university, of a speech recently made, by Captain Brace—who I believe was connected with the Young Men's Christian Association and who is a returned man—on conditions in China at the present time. He said: "The cause of the trouble in China today is the white man, who exploits the oriental and breaks all laws of civilization in doing so."

We as Britishers must take our just share as a consequence of so serious a charge. I want to close this defence, if it can be called a defence, of my letter to the schoolchildren of South-east Grey, by quoting again from Bertrand Russell. He says this, in relation to the forces going out to China: "If we were fighting for a great cause, the prospect of loss might be faced with heroism. But the exact opposite is the case: We are fighting against everything progressive, upright, and intelligent in China, in favor of everything ignorant, reactionary and corrupt. We are fighting to keep civilization under in a great nation, in order that it may be easier to exploit. We are fighting for the right to shoot down young unarmed students when they protest against the killing of Chinese workers by Japanese capitalists in labour disputes. We are fighting to prolong anarchy and civil war among self-seeking militarists dependent upon foreign support. We are fighting to preserve everything that is bad and to prevent the growth of everything that is good. This, alas, is our position throughout Asia. This is the sacred cause which we pursue with a pig-headed obstinacy that must, before long, bring ruin and national disaster upon us. Both as a patriot and as an internationalist I view the situation with feelings little short of despair."

I want to say, regardless of what the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Ross) and the hon. member for Frontenac-Addington (Mr. Edwards) may think that I consider myself a patriot. I have no desire in the world to mislead the school chilren of South-east Grey, or the school-children of Canada, or the people of Canada on any question whatever. To the extent that any details of the letter were inacurate I regret it, but the spirit of the letter was true, and I stand by it, be the consequences what they may.
