TRIALS OF INDIGESTION

Errors About This Trouble Into Which People Fall

Many people so far misunderstand the digestive system as to treat it like a machine; neglecting it until it works sluggishly, then irritating it into work again by the use of purgatives. The stomach needs help at all times, but a study of the process of digestion will show that purgatives, as commonly taken, are seldom necessary and often harmful.

To safeguard your digestion the diet must be controlled. Over-eating is always harmful, but one must assimilate enough food to supply the needs of the blood. Remember, the blood has to carry nourishment to all parts of the body and find fuel for its energy. Hence when the blood becomes weak and fails to do its work, indigestion arises. Therefore the sure remedy for indigestion is to build up the blood. If you suffer from any form of indigestion choose your diet carefully and take wholesome nourishment. Above all, start building up your blood by taking a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Then under the influence of the new blood supply, your digestive system will respond naturally, your appetite improve and your food will do you good. So begin to improve your digestion by starting to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now.

You can get these pills from your druggist or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TWO BOMBAY WOMEN SET UP PRECEDENT

First Women in India to Become Editors — Publish Household Magazine

Bombay—The ever-increasing number of women graduates of Bombay University find very little scope for their talents outside the education department and the medical profession.

Two of these graduates, however, Miss Tara Tilak and Miss Piroj Anandkar, have launched into journalism as a career. They have started a monthly in Marathi under their joint editorship, known as Griha Luxmi (housewife) which aims at teaching Marathi girls how to be successful housewives.

Miss Tilak, who is a devoted student of sociology, and Miss Anandkar, who is interested in the education of girls in Bombay, have ample scope for their enthusiasm and energy in this direction, and judging from the standard of the articles which have appeared in the first few issues of Griha Luxmi and the list of university women who have promised to contribute to its pages, their venture should prove a useful link between university women and their less educated sisters.

Australian Eagles

Southern districts of Australia are being plagued by eagles to such an extent that a campaign of extermination had been undertaken by the inhabitants, according to a report from Adelaide. The eagles, it is said, in groups of fifteen or twenty, frequent water holes and swoop down on stray lambs. So many lambs have been carried off that the Government has put a premium of a half crown on eagles' heads, and shooting parties are the order of the day.

Case Like Solomon's Up to French Judge

Real Mother Demands Foster Mother Give Back Child Sold into Adoption

Paris.—A problem comparable to the famous one solved by King Solomon must be decided by Judge Vallee in the small town of Auversurcise, not far from Paris, when he determines which of two French women is legally the "mother" of Emilienne Desenclos, a pretty French child now nearly two years old.

The actual mother is Elvire Gladieux, whose husband is a gardener, and she is the mother of two other children. At the time Emilienne was expected to be born Mme. Gladieux's husband was sick and out of work and she was desperately poor.

Meeting a friend of hers, Emilienne Desenclos, she agreed to sell the child for the sum of 300 francs and bring it into the world under the latter's name. . The money was paid and the transaction carried out apparently to the satisfaction of both parties.

A short while ago, however, Mme. Gladieux decided that she wanted the child back. . Mme. Desenclos refused to give her up, saying that she paid the money in good faith, had cared for the child for more than a year and that she now loves it as her own. So Mme. Gladieux instituted suit.

Is Another War Near?

Travelers from abroad report that war clouds are again hanging over Europe. They declare that the nations across the Atlantic are feverishly preparing for an outbreak of hostilities. The Balkan disturbance is said to be only a symptom of an impending conflict.

Italy at the present time appears to be the most aggressive nation in Euoope with an army of 750,000 men ready for action. Germany is reported to be coming back with a large army regardless of the limitations placed upon her military forces. France has 600,000 well-trained men and is said to be spending vast sums for war equipment. Russia seems to be working in the dark, but both Great Britain and France are said to be afraid of what she is doing. In the advent of war what the line-up of nations will be is a matter of conjecture, but in all probability every European country will become involved in the next struggle.

We are wondering if another holocaust of war is necessary to impress upon Europe that saner means exist for settling differences.

Trelle's Wheat Very Promising

Ripens Over Two Weeks Earlier Than Marquis—Resists Frost—Straw is Stiff as Bristle — Can Be Easily Handled With Combine, Thereby Reducing Harvesting Costs.

Wembley, Alta.—"Mystery Wheat" is not yet ready for the world, Herman Trelle, world's wheat and oats king, declared recently. Trelle is still developing it on his farm near here.

Two Weeks Earlier.

The wheat king has at last revealed the history and hopes of his new "mystery wheat," which, it is claimed, equals the best wheat now known, and has the great advantage of ripening some 15 to 18 days earlier.

Looks Likely.

On the farm of the wheat wizard stands one plot of the "mystery wheat," which, although it looks dead ripe and ready to cut, has been left standing. From this plot Trelle hopes to develop a wheat that will harden in the straw and reduce its moisture content sufficiently to permit of first-class marketing. This grain ripens early and thereby almost eliminates the danger from frost that would seriously damage Marquis just before it is ready to cut. Some heads of the "mystery wheat," on being examined, were found dead ripe, untouched by recent frosts an da light snow, and so hard that when bitten the kernels literally snapped.. The straw was as stiff as bristle and stood erect up to the drooping head. Trelle intends to leave the wheat stand to see if it will combat heavy frosts and snow.

Cheaply Handled.

"This wheat," Trelle declared, "weighs more to the bushel than the Marquis, and, in appearance, only an expert can tell them apart." He thought that it was easily on a par with Marquis, and, furthermore, it appears to be a wheat that can be mixed and marketed with Marquis without lowering the standard. "A combine wheat, that is, one that will not shatter readily and can therefore be harvested with a combine," he said, "which gives the promise this does, can be marketed at from 14 cents greater profit per bushel than any wheat cut and threshed by the old method." Mystery wheat does not yield quite as much as Marquis, but this is offset by the fact that it is safer and can be handled so much more economically. There is also another advantage, Trelle revealed. This new type wil lmake it possible for Canadian wheat to reach the world markets fully two weeks earlier.—Canadian Press dispatch.

That Which We Call a Rose

A swindler has been counterfeiting the rose, and we don't mean "Abie's." He has been imitating or diluting the perfume of a well-known French firm and selling it as the genuine article to retail shops. Not only the rose, but chypre, l'origan and other fancy scents have been watered and doctored and put into bottles that are exactly like the originals. Labels, corks, wrappings and boxes have been made up to look like the package of the real perfume, and about the whole had been sprayed the familiar aroma of the Paris house.

The story of this counterfeiter reads very much like the story of detected bootleggers. In their possession the police also find bottles, labels stoppers and cartons made in close imitation of containers of genuine liquors. There is one point of difference. The bootleggers, despite all their elaborate efforts to make their home-made gin or whiskey look real, can hardly expect to be believed. The perfume swindler had no such skepticism to contend with. . He passed himself off as a bona fide salesman of the manufacturing house, and the unlucky retailers were completely taken in.

Imitating perfume seems to be a new form of graft. Crooks and confidence men are usually satisfied with the old games, but occasionally a fellow of inventive mind thinks up a new one. The next man to try it, or the other members of this one's gang, will not be so fortunate, for shopkeepers will suspect all perfume salesmen of running their own still and doing their own bottling.
