Liquor Consumption.

The New York Herald says the society for the prevention of crime recently made a careful investigation of the retail liquor business in the city, and estimated the number of places for the sale of ardent spirits, licensed and unlicensed, at over eight thousand, not including saloons where beer alone is sold. The society would naturally adopt extreme figures; but we may safely calculate the total number of liquor and beer establishments at eight thousand. The number of drinks of liquor, wine and beer sold at each place per day would doubtless average at least two hundred, which gives a consumption of one million six hundred thousand drinks daily, or four hundred and eighty million drinks in three hundred days. If we estimate three-fourths of the consumption to be beer we have one hundred and twenty million glasses of liquor and three hundred and sixty million glasses of beer. A tax of two cents per glass on liquors and half a cent on beer, based on these figures, would realize to the city four million two hundred thousand dollars yearly. We have no doubt, however, that this is an under estimate and that the revenue derived in New York from such a tax would be nearly or quite five million dollars annually.

THE CRIMEAN WAR.—In the Crimean war England vigorously suppressed the attempts of the independent Greeks to secure greater freedom for their compatriots under Turkish rule. Now, the English feel disposed to set up the little Kingdom of Greece as, if not the heir, at least a counterpoise to the new Russo-Ottoman Empire. There are, however, several obstacles in the way of this scheme. The Greek nation is too small for so great a task. A nation of about four millions, including the inhabitants of the Kingdom as well as the subjects of the Sultan, can hardly be expected in our time to establish an empire, nor has the independent portion of it shown the political ability required for such an undertaking. The shadow of a great name is certainly not sufficient for it. Still King George has proved himself a ruler of no mean ability, and comes of a good stock.
