Conditions in Europe

in Europe one needs two, and preferably three, languages—English, French and German.

The countryside in France, Germany and Czechoslovakia looks equally lovely; there is no waste land, and in the two latter countries there is a great deal of well-kept forest—even the twigs are picked up by girls and women, tied into neat bundles and used for firewood. The fields are very small; they are not fenced off from each other, and with the different crops it gives the country a curious checker-board appearance. Hops are a leading crop in South Germany, and on the same ground some other crop, which looked like turnips.

Coming alone from Paris to Prague—called Praha by the natives of the city—I thought I would find no one who would understand English, but almost all the travellers on the first class train, called the Orient express, were English or American. On the journey two customs officials examined our luggage and passport. Three languages, three kinds of money were used, and three varieties of food served. How can Europe understand herself when she speaks with a dozen tongues?

Prague is a beautiful city; the cathedral, the castle old home of the kings, now occupied by the President of the republic and Minister of External Affairs are very beautiful. The cathedral is of Gothic architecture, the oldest in Central Europe. The Czechs trace their kings back to 900 A.D. Most of them are buried under the church, where the graves have almost become shrines. The new part was begun a hundred years ago and is not yet completed. In spite of the size of the building the seating capacity is not great.

The Women's International League For Peace held the Congress in a resident school owned by the Czech Farmers' Co-operatives. It is a large and well-equipped building.

Women from 26 coountries convened here for six days. They were a remarkable group, the most prominent of which was the international President, Jane Adams, of Chicago. It is hard to say wherein lies the remarkable power of this woman. She is devotedly loved and can hold together people who, without her, would see only disagreement and discord.. She had studied world problems closely for many years — but with all her knowledge she parades none; she is motherly, witty and wise.

Emmy Freundlich, member of the Australian Parliament, is an economic expert. She was the only woman Government representative at the World Economic Conference. Womenwho are medical doctors, doctors, doctors of law, scientists, journalists, teachers, sditors, etc., attended. An arresting figure is Mrs. Skeffington of Ireland, who has suffered imprisonment and forced feeding in Ireland's cause. Her husband was killed in the Eastern rebellion while trying to reconcile opposing forces. Six women M.P's represented Great Britain, Austria, Denmark, Ukrania, Belgium and Canada, and just to give tone to the Congress we had a Countess from Denmark and a titled English woman.

Twelve women elected by the Congress form the International Executive, to which body I have been elected.

The Assembly of the League of Nations convenes this morning, with Sir George Foster and myself as part of the Canadian delegation.

Peaches, not Pumpkins

Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Phillips received a splendid gift through the mail from Mr. Robert Swanton of Donald, Washington, in the form of nine gorgeous peaches, which were grown in that state. They were the largest we have ever seen and we can also highly recommend their flavour, as The Advance was presented with the largest by Mrs. Phillips. This specimen weighed fourteen ounces and measured eleven and three-quarter inches in circumference. The nine peaches weighed exactly six pounds and two ounces. It will be remembered that last year Mr. Swanton also sent over some exceptionally large apples.

R. W. Shaw Passes

After a brief illness Mr. Robt. W. Shaw passed away at his home at Lions Head on Thursday morning of last week at the age of 50 years. He leaves to mourn the loss of a devoted husband and father his wife, who was formerly Miss Myrtle Thurston and six children, four boys and three girls. The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon, service being held in Lions Head United church, which was inadequate for the large number of friends who came to pay their last respects to one who was highly regarded throughout the Peninsula. Interment took place in Eastnor cemetery the L.O.L., of which he was a member, taking part in the service.
